Harlem Danced De Crespigny Dies Edison's Fortune Too Big? $1 Bank Accounts

Men, women, children danced, sang, rang bells in the streets of Harlem and in colored sections of other cities last night. The colored race has a prize fighting champion. Joe Louis, only twenty-one, with absolute precision and complete ease, defeated Carnera, powerful white man, sixty pounds heavier, many inches taller than himself, with a far longer "reach."

Arthur Johnson, colored, among the greatest fighters of all time, predicted "that Joe Louis will knock that big Primo Carnera right into the middle of Labor Day," and Joe Louis did exactly that. He probably knocked Carnera farther than Labor Day, perhaps out of the fighting picture forever.

Now that the greatest heavyweight prize fighter on earth is a twenty-one-year-old colored man, the question is what will happen to him when wealth begins pouring in on him, and cunning white men begin exploiting him in the usual dishonest fashion?

That depends on what Joe Louis does. If he lets things inside of bottles STAY INSIDE OF BOTTLES, and, for his business affairs, secures the protection of an intelligent, honest lawyer, instead of some racketeer, he may not die poor, after a few years of leaning against a Harlem bar, telling how great he used to be.

Those that never won a heavyweight prize fight championship, need not envy Joe Louis. It would take two or three good, fairy godmothers from the upper reaches of the magic Nile to take him safely through what lies ahead of him.

Claude Champion De Crespigny, well-known English sportsman, dead at 88, of Norman descent, was born too late to "tilt" in steel armor. So he spent his life looking for adventure; fought in the army and navy, was decorated for saving a drowning man, escaped from a python's coils in India, killed a tiger that attacked him, broke the neck of a charging rhinoceros, at two yards distance, with a soft-nose bullet; broke both legs in an early balloon flight, broke both arms three times in the hunting field, broke ribs three times, steeplechasing; had fingers broken several times in boxing, challenged a relative to a duel at 73, dived into an icy pool at 83 from a height of 30 feet.

How surprised Sir Claude will be when he starts telling all of this to the angels, and they stop him, saying, "we are only interested in the human life that you saved. What you did to rhinoceros, pythons, and icy pools interests us angels not at all"

A final accounting shows that Thomas A. Edison left an estate of $2,871,758. Do you think that was too much? Would you have the government take half from Edison's children, leaving out the question as to whether or not the children would be better off without it?

Edison was a benefactor of the whole world, which is literally lighted by his genius. He created payrolls representing hundreds of millions a year and values representing many billions. Does it seem to any learned professor that $2,871,758 is too big a reward to pay for that kind of service?

A New York banker, Alexander Efron, of the National Safety Bank & Trust Company, has an idea that might interest other bankers in these depression days. Knowledge of human nature tells him that many would like to have a bank account and a check book that can't "bank" with George F. Baker, Jr., of the First National Bank, because he will not take your account unless you keep a permanent balance of at least $40,000.

Mr. Efron will open an account for as little as one dollar, give you a bank book and let you draw checks for ten cents and up. He charges five cents for each check, that is the "catch," and if you overdraw, it costs you one dollar.

When Mr. Boldt opened the old Waldorf-Astoria on the site of the Astor Fifth avenue residence, somebody said he was "providing exclusiveness for the masses." Mr. Efron is doing that, if a check book is "exclusive."

Thomas J. Watson, delegated to the International Chamber of Commerce convention in Paris, says the United States is on the eve of the greatest prosperity era it has ever known, and this country is about to "launch a recovery of enormous extent, the future of which is not generally visualized."

Pray that this may prove to be all wisdom, and not interesting guess work.

$35,000,000 IN STATE JOB RELIEF, NEW CURLEY PLAN

ROOSEVELT ASKS 'GOLD SUIT BAN'

By Associated Press

Washington, June 27—Legislation to tighten up loopholes in the nation's new monetary system was recommended to Congress today by President Roosevelt.

The President's action was an outgrowth of the Supreme Court's decision in the gold cases which intimated that recovery could be made in the Court of Claims if actual damages could be proved as a result of devaluation of the gold dollar by approximately 40 per cent.

"Before the termination of this session of the Congress," the President said in a special message, "I believe it is important that definite action be taken to eliminate any uncertainty with respect to the right of holders of gold clause bonds of the government to sue for payment either in gold or else in legal tender with an additional sum of 60 cents on every dollar.

"To this end, I urge the withdrawal by the United States of its consent to be sued upon its currency or securities."

Specifically, the President recommended immediate enactment of legislation:

"1. That will authorize and direct the Secretary of the Treasury, at the request of the holders of gold clause securities of the United States, to make payment therefore in cash, dollar for dollar, with accrued interest, or at the holder's direction, to exchange such securities for non-gold clause securities with the same interest rate and maturity:

TO STOP ALL SUITS

"2. That will terminate any consent which the United States may have voluntarily given to be sued on its securities, coins or currencies;

"3. That will reaffirm the fixed policy of the United States to make payment to all holders of its securities, coins or currencies on an equal or uniform dollar for dollar basis and will make appropriations available for payments on this basis and on this basis only."

'Day-Off' Honeymooners

This is a busy season in Hollywood for Screen Actress Lyda Roberti, so a single day-off was all she could give to her wedding and honeymoon. With Bridegroom Bud Ernst, she's shown awaiting to climb aboard the airplane which took the sweethearts to Yuma, Ariz., for the ceremony, then back to the film colony to report for duty.

Braves Field, June 27—A "grand slam" home run by Wally Berger in the fifth inning with three men on brought his total for the season to 15 in the first game of a twi-bill here this afternoon with the Phillies.

The Braves took the opening game of the six-game series behind some nice pitching by Ed Brandt.

Despite the shock auffered yesterday with the loss of Ed Moriarty, the Braves put on a bright show for the sweltering group of 7000 fans who sat in on the doubleheader.

The Braves grabbed two runs in the first inning on Mallon's double, after Coscarart had walked. Lee bounced a hit off Ryan's glove to score Coscarart and send Mallon to third. Berger forced Lee and Mallon tallied.

In the third, Mallon doubled and hung up Boston's third run on Lee's two-bagger.

Then and Now

A READING of President Roosevelt's successive state papers on taxation raises the question as to WHO HAS CONVERTED HIM to the altered views which he recently expressed in his message to Congress.

This "soak the rich" message, giving a suggestion of Huey Long's redistribution of wealth ideas, seems to us at variance with the taxation philosophy expressed by Mr. Roosevelt in his campaign address at Pittsburgh on October 19, 1932.

At that time, Mr. Roosevelt did not look upon taxation as a magic reservoir capable of emitting an unlimited stream of funds to finance the unreasonable extravagance of bureaucrats.

* * *

IN THE PITTSBURGH address, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"Quite apart from every man's own tax assessment, that burden is a brake on any return to normal business activity.

"Taxes are paid in the sweat of every man who labors because they are a burden on production and can be paid only by production. If excessive, they are reflected in idle factories, tax-sold farms, and hence, in hordes of the hungry stamping the streets and seeking jobs in vain.

"Our workers may never see a tax bill, but they pay in deductions from wages, in increased cost of what they buy, or (as now) in broad cessation of employment."

It is regrettable that the President has wandered from the path which he laid out nearly three years ago.

APPARENTLY, IN THE MATTER OF TAXATION VIEWS THERE ARE TWO MR. ROOSEVELTS.

U. S. AID ASKED IN KEEPING WAGES UP

By Associated Press

Washington, June 27—Governor Curley of Massachusetts told Relief Administrator Hopkins today he was prepared to ask the legislature to authorize a $35,000,000 bond issue for state work relief projects.

Curley said his proposal was made on the condition that a compensatory program be agreed to by the federal government.

He explained the purpose of the plan was to enable the State to conduct its share of the work program independently.

This, he said, would enable the State to employ such labor as it saw fit and to pay prevailing rates of wages on its projects.

The federal government, on the other hand, would carry out its program on a 100 per cent cost basis and under its own work relief policies.

"We discussed this plan at some length and apparently it was agreeable to him," Curley said.

The Governor said the plan of carrying on an independent state program would make it possible to employ such labor as the state saw fit and to pay prevailing wages on the projects financed by the commonwealth.

On Tuesday Frank Foy, Massachusetts works progress director, and Theodore V. Parker, state public works administrator, argued with administration officials to be permitted to pay prevailing wages in the Bay State.

ALLOCATES CASH

Curley said that if his proposal were accepted $35,000,000 of state funds would be expended as follows:

Berlin, June 27—Dictatorial decrees went into effect today shaping anew the lives of all Germans without giving the chance either to approve or protest.

Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's "rubber stamp" cabinet, meeting for the last time before the summer holidays and four days before the first anniversary of the bloody June 30 Nazi "purge," adopted these measures:

Making labor camp service compulsory for 200,000 young men and 100,000 young women annually.

Demanding that everyone in Germany, even foreigners domiciled here, participate actively in air protection exercises.

Authorizing revisions of the penal code "in the light of National Socialistic tenets" and regulating trials.

Regulating official salaries.

Eva Coo Sobs 'I'm Innocent'

Cushing, N. Y., June 27—Eva Coo passed by her breakfast today and, from her death house cell, cried out her innocence.

Meanwhile her attorney sought to lay before Governor Herbert H. Lehman purported new evidence in one last effort to save the doomed woman from electrocution in Sing Sing tonight.

David Slade, her counsel, said Mrs. Coo gave him information in a lengthy conversation last night which he regarded as vital new evidence.

"This information is from a person in no way connected with the case," Slade said.

Slade said he would go to Albany at once in an effort to lay the new evidence before Governor Lehman.

After refusing breakfast, Mrs. Coo, found guilty of murdering Harry Wright, a handy man about her roadhouse in Cooperstown,

TWO WIVES GET LOVE'S REVENGE IF EVA COO DIES

'I'D STRAP HER IN CHAIR!' CRIES ONE

By DOROTHY KILGALLEN
International News Service Special Correspondent.

Cooperstown, N. Y., June 27—Two women of the hills will get their revenge tonight when "Little Eva" Coo goes to the electric chair.

They are the wives to whom Eva was the "other woman." She stole their husbands, with her flashy ways and her blonde hair and her bold laughter; she broke up their homes, and their lives.

"I'd like to watch her go to the chair," the first wife said bitterly today. "I'd like to strap her in and then slap her face good before they turned on the juice."

The woman, whose name for obvious reasons is withheld, is the wife of a well-to-do business man.

WHAT PRICE LOVE THEFT?

He met "Little Eva" at her roadhouse, and fell for her. She welcomed him to the wild, all-night parties, and she filled him full of her liquor, and every night he was in town he spent at her place.

When his business took him out of town he used to send Eva long letters, telling her he couldn't wait to be back in her arms.

"Yes, she stole my husband all right," the woman said. "But I guess where she's going she won't steal any more."

The other wife was only a little more compassionate.

"I pity Eva Coo because she's such a bad woman," she said grimly. "I wouldn't have her sins on me for all the money and all the men in the world, and that was all she cared for—money and men."

This second woman divorced her husband for his affair with Eva Coo.

Deeper in the backwoods, in the squatter's yellow cottage of Martha Clift's old mother, a whole family is praying that nothing will come between Ea Coo and the final fulfillment of the law.

"Let 'er die," croaked the old woman, Mrs. Anna Miller. "The sooner she dies the sooner my girl, Martha, gets free."

Martha is serving a 20-year-to-life term in Bedford for the killing of Harry Wright, the same crime for which Eva dies tonight in the chair.

She sold Eva's life for her own, bargaining her confession for a jail term.

"And she won't serve 20 years, nor half of that," Mrs. Miller said. "Don Grant (the district attorney) will have her out soon as that woman is out of the way."

GOOD TILL EVA CAME

The mother is old and toothless. She hobbles about the cottage on a crude padded wheel, a ball of rags.

"My girl was a good girl," she said shrilly. "How she came to be mixed with the likes of Eva Coo, I don't know. All she told me what happened that night up on Crumhorn Mountain, and I tell you sure as I'm sittin' here, Martha didn't knew what was going to happen up there no more than Harry did.

"She thought they were going up there for shrubs. She'd heard Eva say she planned to do away with Harry, but she never thought she was going to do it that night. She told me all this in Cooperstown jail, before she went away.

"She said: 'Mom, this is the truth. We got up in that driveway and Harry and Eva got out, and she told me to pull up.

"As I pulled up she hit him over the head with the mallet. I was scared and I couldn't stop the car. Then she hit him three times more."

The old lady grinned.

INSURANCE ON MARTHA

"She took out insurance on my girl Martha and on Martha's kids, and I guess first thing we know she'd be doing away with them."

As Mrs. Miller talked Martha's two children, Gordon, 4, and his sister, Frances Louise, 7, ran through the room the little girl in her bare feet.

"Put on your shoes, Frances," the old lady said incontinently, "company's here."

The little girl, a red head, just grinned.

"Can't get her to put on shoes," the grandmother said.

"Well, as I was sayin', there's nobody in these parts goin' to miss Eva. She never even believes in God.

"My girl Martha used to go to church regular and read the Bible, but Eva used to tell her, 'You're plumb crazy to believe in that book; when you die you die and that's all there is to it.'

"My girl never could talk her into readin' it.

"But my girl Martha never would have killed that Harry Wright. Why, she was chicken-hearted. I've seen her almost turn her car over to keep from hittin' a dog on the road.

"No easier to kill Harry Wright than a dog."

Eva's name echoes in shouts and murmurs all over the countryside as her time to die draws near. Up at Elmer Bastida's (he keeps a gas pump on the Oneonta road), Eva's dog and her parrot are acting restless.

Susie, a little brown lapdog, and Renee, the green bird, are what you'd expect to find in the over-stuffed parlor of a lady like Eva.

Eva liked the little dog, and she taught the parrot to swear as fluently as she could herself.

EVA'S CRY ECHOES THERE

The little dog barked.

"They seem kind of uneasy today," Elmer said. "Almost like they knew what was going to happen."

Over at Eva's roadhouse a 23-year-old girl, Marion Palmer, shivered as she watched the clock.

"I'm all alone here; Genevieve's gone to New York, and I'm going to be alone tonight when Eva goes," Marion said.

"Poor Eva, I feel kind of sorry for her.

"Put on your shoes, Frances," the old lady said incontinently, "company's here."

The little girl, a red head, just grinned.

"Can't get her to put on shoes," the grandmother said.

Woman Death Chair Claims, Accusers and Weapon in Crime

MRS. EVA COO

HARRY NABINGER

MARTHA CLIFT

Unless she is saved from the electric chair by a last-minute commutation of her sentence by the governor of New York, Mrs. Eva Coo, convicted "insurance" murderess, has seen her last sunrise. She is to be executed tonight in Sing Sing prison. Of her two principal accusers, one, Mrs. Martha Clift, is serving a 20-year sentence as an accomplice in the crime. The other, Harry Nabinger, a former admirer of Mrs. Coo, is endeavoring to let time wipe out the memory of the association. According to the story of the killing, as reconstructed by the prosecution, Mrs. Coo, after taking out insurance on the life of Harry Wright, a handyman, struck him over the head with a mallet. Mrs. Clift then ran an automobile back and forth across his unconscious form. The mallet was one of the exhibits at the trial. Mrs. Clift is shown in conference with her attorney.

EVA COO SOBS IN HER CELL

once more reiterated her cry of innocence.

"I am as innocent of this crime as I could be," she declared. "As God is my witness, I never killed Harry Wright or anyone else.

"If Governor Lehman knew all the facts, he wouldn't deny me a commutation."

The governor, following his usual procedure, has arranged to keep an open telephone line between the executive mansion and the death house tonight, in case there should be some reason for a last-minute decision.

MRS. COO IN COLLAPSE

But there has been no hint from the executive offices that he will extend to Eva the clemency he refused to Mrs. Anna Antonio, the last woman to be executed in this state.

She is destined to die with Leonard Scarnici, New York city gangster, convicted of the murder of Detective James Stevens two years ago.

But Scarnici was given new hope today when he was taken to Federal court in New York, where a stay of execution is sought.

Scarnici has been kept alive because District Attorney John T. Delaney of Albany County believes his testimony will aid in the conviction of the three missing alleged kidnapers in the John J. O'Connell case.

As the hands of the clock ticked slowly toward the hour of doom Mrs. Coo was reported near complete collapse today in her death house cell.

Throughout yesterday, the ash blond woman derived some degree of hope from the belief the governor was still considering her request for commutation of her sentence to life imprisonment.

ABANDONS LAST HOPE

As the hours passed without word from Albany, however, despair took possession of Mrs. Coo.

Death house attaches said she was convinced today that the governor would not interfere in her behalf.

She faces death without having seen her mother, who lives in Canada. Nor has she seen her five sisters and three brothers since her arrest.

"I would prefer they did not see me under such unpleasant circumstances," she is reported to have said.

If she goes to the chair, Mrs. Coo will be the fifth woman to pay the supreme penalty exacted by the law in New York State.

She was convicted of slaying Wright for his insurances money with the connivance of Mrs. Martha Clift, who is serving a life sentence for her part in the crime.

Eva's Companion in Death Fights for New U.S. Respite

By International News Service

Ossining, N. Y., June 27—Eva Coo's death house companion today left her to go, possibly, to the electric chair alone tonight.

He is Leonard Scarnici, convicted slayer of a detective in a Rensselaer bank robbery. Scarnici, scheduled to walk the last mile with the lynx-eyed mistress of the backwoods fleshpots, was taken out of Sing Sing prison and into Federal court in a dramatic, unprecedented action on an execution eve.

Hearing on a writ of habeas corpus was postponed by Federal Judge William Bondy until 4 p. m.

The delay was granted to permit the attorneys time to cite authorities on the question:

"Does the New York State code which permits amendment of an indictment by a judge violate the federal constitution?"

William H. Murray of Troy, attorney for Scarnici, cited the Tom Mooney case in which the United States Supreme Court recently ruled that Mooney's remedy must be through a writ of habeas corpus in Federal Court.

If Scarnici wins, he will come back to the prison, but not to the death house—or the chair.

If he loses, he will either follow or precede Eva to death at 11 p.m.

Scarnici's fortune brought a warm ray of hope and at the same time a chill of terror to the profit-inspired murderess of Harry (Gimpy) Wright.

If it's a lucky day for Scarnici, it might it not be for her, too? But if he gets off and she doesn't, she'll be all alone in the death march.

Stubbornly protesting her innocence, Eva has done nothing in the way of preparing for death.

Horse Bolts At City Hall

A runaway horse was stopped today by Patrolman Michael F. O'Brien in crowded School street at the noon rush hour.

The horse had bolted while passing City Hall, throwing one boy from the wagon. The boy, John McDonald, 13, of Mt. Vernon street, Roxbury, was nearly thrown from his seat.

Hundreds of passersby were imperilled by the runaway.

A former steeplechase jockey, O'Brien was considered a crack army horseman when overseas with the First Division. O'Brien is attached to Mayor Mansfield's office at City Hall.

FARMER SLAIN; HUNT WEAPON

Portsmouth, R. I., June 27—Convinced that William S. Lopes, 30, farmer and father of two children, was murdered, state police this afternoon began a search for the death weapon.

Lopes' body was found a quarter of a mile from his home on Main street by a woman motorist, whose identity police refused to reveal.

Dr. Bertram W. Sterrs, medical examiner, found that the skull had been smashed as if with a blunt instrument, and the body badly bruised as if from pummeling.

The two hands were clenched and one was bruised, as if in fighting.

Phone Wires Cut

Because of an epidemic of cutting of telephone wires, the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. today appealed to Medford police to assist them in putting a stop to the practice.

The Massachusetts executive went from relief headquarters to the War Department to urge before the chief of army engineers approval of proposed development in the Merrimack, Blackstone and Connecticut River valleys.

He hoped to obtain a White House audience late this afternoon and had scheduled a conference with Public Works Administrator Ickes tomorrow.

Accompanying the governor were Adjutant General William I. Rose, Charles Howard, state director of administration finance; William H. Callahan, commissioner of public works, nd Miss Elizabeth A. Herlihy, advisor on state public works planning.

All 100 P. C. U. S. Grants Here Go to Foy

All requests for 100 per cent grant projects from the federal government must be filed with Frank Foy, state director of the National Emergency Council, the House Ways and Means Comittee was today informed by Col. Theodore W. Parker, acting director of the PWA administration in Massachusetts.

Col. Parker, in discussing the proposed huge Merrimac Valley development, said he received instructions from Washington on the procedure to be followed on requests for 100 per cent grants.

He stated that legal authority must be set up by the state before the federal governmnt could give proper consideration to such requests.

The authority would then submit the proposal to the state director of the National Emergency Council which in turn would forward it to Washington.

The plan for the Merrimac Valley undertaking proposed has been estimated at $40,000,000.

Major George R. Dalrymple of Haverhill, strongly urged passage of a bill before the committee to set up such an authority but stressed that the cities and towns affected are in no position to assist in the undertaking financially.

LONG CONGRESS DELAY LOOMS ON 'RICH TAX'

By Associated Press

Washington, June 27—Discarding all efforts for high speed action on President Roosevelt's tax-the-wealth program, Democratic leaders today outlined a schedule calling for weeks of hearing and debate.

Legislators said the House would not reach a showdown vote on the President's plan until the last week in July, and that the Senate would act perhaps three to six weeks later.

These plans emerged from a tangled situation which found President Roosevelt disavowing any intention of seeking to push the taxes through Congress by Saturday night. He said emphatically that while he desired action this session, he had never considered a plan of attaching the taxes to the $500,000,000 "nuisance" tax resolution and getting them through this week.

Democratic leaders said today that, instead of attaching the new levies on inheritances, gifts, corporations and large incomes to the nuisance taxes, the President's program would be made into a separate bill and put through the regular course.

Early next week the House ways and means committee will start hearings. Chairman Doughton said hearings would last "two or three weeks."

3 HELD GUILTY OF CONTEMPT

Brockton, June 27—For circulating a pamphlet in which it was charged the government was "railroading" a union official to jail, three men today were found guilty by superior court of constructive contempt.

They are Frank Piesco and George N. Woodbury of Brockton, and Aldino Felicani of North Cambridge.

Ralph Piesco today was sentenced to 2½ years in Plymouth House of Correction, on appeal from a superior court for sentence on the conviction of assault with a dangerous weapon.

OWL CAR, BUS New 'L' Service

Extension of "owl" car and bus service in Dorchester and Medford was announced today by the Boston Elevated.

The night bus service between Norfolk street and Gallivan boulevard to Andrew station will be extended to Broadway and Dorchester avenues and operated over a slightly different route—from Washington street and Gallivan boulevard, Washington street, Codman square, Norfolk and Morton streets, Gallivan boulevard, Dorchester avenue to Broadway.

The Medford square-Sullivan square service will be operated over Salem street and the Fellsway, Main street and Winter Hill.

Quincy Bonfire

There will be a hot time in Quincy on the Fourth of July, for the Quincy Post, American Legion, was completing plans today for a monster bonfire at Merrymount Park.

Wives Freed Of Same Mate

By rare teamwork, Mrs. Joseph Myers No. 1 and Mrs. Joseph Myers No. 2 are both now free of any entanglement with their joint husband.

Mrs. Mary Myers of Cambridge, in probate court at East Cambridge today helped Mrs. Gertie Myers of Gloucester obtain a divorce on the ground of desertion.

She did so because Mrs. Gertie Myers helped her obtain an annulment from the same man several weeks ago.

Ban on 'Ecstasy' Nude

Foreign Film Out in U. S.

JURY O. K.'S POPE'S STAND

By Universal Service

New York, June 27—America will have no chance to view the flashy Czecho-Slovak movie, "Ecstasy," a federal jury has decided.

Deciding that pictures of beautiful Hedy Kiesler in the nude "suggested immoral thoughts," the jury spent only 35 minutes to arrive at the conclusion that the film would be a great detriment to American morals.

Attorneys for the distributors moved immediately to appeal, saying:

"The author does not intend to present to you only a nude woman. She is a woman struggling to say yes or no, and nature has something to say to her."

The jury's verdict concurred with that of Pope Pius XI and Adolf Hitler, both of whom condemned the film, not only for the nudity of its star, but for the ecstatic expressions of her face during close-ups.

Hedy's husband, Fritz Mandel, Austrian millionaire, has tried with little success to suppress all photographs of his wife since the film's initial showing and the ensuing furore.

The film was its own first witness, being run off before Judge John C. Knox and a jury in a projection room in which spectators were hanging from the transoms.

So great was the press of spectators that Juror No. 9 found himself brushed aside in the rush and temporarily locked out.

Hailed as an audacious, even a salacious, film offering, "Ecstasy" at its courtroom premiere disappointed many whose hopes had apparently been raised to the boiling point by the advance billing.

Nevertheless, there were daring scenes.

With little dialogue, it portrays pictorially the erotic story of a woman who goes swimming in the nude, loses her clothes when her horse runs away, spends a night with the man who catches the horse.

Even though in the Czechoslovakian movie, "Ecstasy," there are scenes in which she wears a lot less clothes than this—even dispensing occasionally with all clothes, whatsoever—Actress Heda Keisler, according to producers of her film, plays the role of a woman who isn't "bad" at heart, but is just a victim of circumstances. A New York federal jury, however, has decided that Heda's allure is too "suggestive."

Mermaids, as anyone knows, don't bother with bathing suits. And neither does Screen Actress Heda Keisler, playing this scene in the Czechoslovakian movie, "Ecstasy," officially pronounced "too naughty" for showing before American audiences. The film is in the hands of Federal authorities.

Moriarty Quits Baseball to Follow 4 Young Priests

Holyoke, June 27—In the recent ordination of three former Sacred Heart boys and the approaching ordination of a fourth, friends believed they saw today the answer to Ed Moriarty's sudden decision to quit baseball for the priesthood.

All four young men—the three new priests and the fourth to come—are graduates of Holy Cross. Ed was graduated from Holy Cross a week ago, then joined the Boston Braves.

All four attended the Sacred Heart school here. Ed lives in the shadow of the school and also attended there.

All four were athletes, but they gave up football and baseball. Four in five years older than Ed, he, as a boy, had always admired them in sports, according to his friends.

Ordained on June 10 were the Rev. Morgan McCarthy, the Rev. John Kelly and the Rev. Leonard B. Burke.

To be ordained on Sunday, July 7, at Sacred Heart Church, is John Harrington, now on his way home from France, where he has been a seminarian.

Today, his brief week as a big league player with the Braves all over, Ed Moriarty was up early to greet his friends, but he was reticent and refused to enlarge on his statements of last night that he intended entering the priesthood.

Ed's father, a plasterer, went to work as usual, still a bit bewildered at the sudden shift in his son's plans.

Ed's brother, also a plasterer, likewise went to work as usual. Two sisters, Eileen and Anna, are at home, as is another brother, Thomas Moriarty, Jr.

All through college, Ed was their pride as a scholar and an athlete, and since his auspicious debut with the Braves last week, the home members of the family had been close to the radio, listening to broadcasts of the Braves games.

But that is all over now. Following yesterday's disastrous double header with the Pittsburgh Pirates, when the Braves dropped both games and Moriarty hit for one out of eight and made two errors out of nine chances, Ed announced his retirement to the Braves management.

He was still batting .324, however, for his brief tenure in the big league.

"All along I have wanted to study for the priesthood," he said. "I conferred with advisers and came to the sudden decision that I would start immediately preparing for examinations to enter the Grand Seminary in Montreal."

That will come, according to Ed, late in the Summer. It will be near World Series time.

Cotton Tax Probed Here

Investigation into payments of the cotton textile processing tax is under way by federal agents, it was understood today at the federal building.

This report came after Internal Revenue Collectors Michael Daly and James Christoforo were seen entering and then leaving the federal grand jury room.

One of the taxes declared to be under probe is that of a manufacturer said to have side-stepped a large payment through jockeying of accounts.

The cotton processing tax, long bitterly fought, is one assessed on manufacturers by the federal government, to pay off southern planters for not planting cotton.

Natural Causes

Brockton, June 27—Mrs. Theresa Hazelton Hutchson, 34, of Stoughton, a well known church singer, who was found dead in an automobile here last night, died of natural causes, according to Medical Examiner Bodreski.

Rose Knellar Case Dropped

The state decreed today that Rose Knellar be allowed to forget the wedding present that prevented her wedding.

District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing filed with the Superior Court clerk in Dedham a notice that he had not pressed the indictment charging Rose, Abe Faber's erstwhile fiance, with larceny of "more than $100" from the Needham Trust Company.

This was the only undisposed-of charge in the Millen-Faber case.

After the Needham bank murders for which he and the Millen brothers paid with their lives, Faber gave Rose a package containing $3580 of the robbery loot, told her it was a wedding present from a friend and not to open it until their wedding in June, 1934.

She opened it after his arrest and turned the money over to police, and June, 1934, brought Faber's pronouncement of doom by jury instead of marriage to the elfin-like little Dorchester girl.

The Talk of the Town

Samuel Leach has served some three million sodas, sundaes, ice creams and beverages in his 40 years at a Thompson's Spa fountain.

"Chocolate Soda"
Says the Dean

"WHAT gets the call at Thompson's Spa?" asked the inquiring reporter.

"Chocolate Soda," replied the dean of the art of soda in Boston, as reported last week in the Traveler. "Through all the changes of style and taste, chocolate soda remains the unchangeable popular favorite. There isn't a close second . . ."

What is there about a Thompson's Spa chocolate soda that explains such popularity? We can't tell you. Mr. Leach can't tell you. But your first taste will tell you . . .

On a hot day the answer is so satisfying that it's worth a special trip to the nearest Thompson's Spa fountain to get it.

HUNT FOR BODY OF BOY VICTIM

Under some of the most difficult conditions ever encountered in a similar quest, searchers were hunting today for the body of a five-year-old boy drowned Monday in a clay pit off Bowdoin street, Medford.

More than 4000 watchers were around the pit as two powerful electric pumps attempted to drain the hole, which already has nearly taken the life of one diver and caused a second to quit.

Firemen, policemen, city laborers and a fleet of 20 trucks were engaged in the search, which has been continuous night and day since Monday, for the body of Edward H. Hogan of 582 Boston avenue, Medford.

He was drowned, while his 9-year-old brother, George, was saved.

On several occasions, so treacherous are the clay banks and undermined shelves, workmen have barely been saved from dropping into the morass, which originally was water 20 to 45 feet deep.

The 20 trucks were carting stone and earth to the claypit in an endeavor to dam brooks and springs feeding it.

On a large staging which it has been necessary to hang over the pit for the workmen some member of the drowned boy's family has been watching since the hunt began.

Driver Burned In Oil Blast

In an explosion of an oil truck in Washington street, Somerville, today, Earl Fagans, 32, of Gilman street, Somerville, was thrown from the truck and so badly burned he may die.

He was taken to Central Hospital, Somerville, where it was reported that burns covered nearly two-thirds of his body.

The blast occurred in the yard of the American Oil products Company, where Fagans is employed.

He was attending on the top of the tank truck as it was being loaded with gasoline and road oil. It is believed fumes were ignited by a spark struck by the filling hose against the side of the tank.

Fagans was tossed through the air, his clothing bursting into flames. Fellow workers fought through dense black smoke and burning oil to rescue him.

Somerville firemen extinguished the blaze with chemicals. Damage to the truck was nearly $3000.

HIGH COURT Asked to Rule on 'L'

An order calling for an opinion of the Supreme Court on the constitutionality of a bill, now before the Legislature, calling for acquisition by the Boston Metropolitan District of the entire assets, property and franchises of the Boston Elevated Railway Company, was reported today in the House by the ways and means committee.

Nine questions are submitted in the report for the court to answer in the event that the House approves the asking of the opinion. They deal with every phase, financial and otherwise, of complete public ownership of the road.

9019 CHILDREN Graduate Today

HEIRESS SEEKS $35,000 FROM FINANCIAL 'FAST THINKER'

MERRY FAHRNEY

Girl Suing for Heritance

Chicago, June 27—Charging that she met a fast moving, fast thinking gentleman who knew his finances much to her own regret, and loss, Merry Fahrney, Oak Park patent medicine heiress, is suing for the return of a $30,000 check and a $5000 promissory note which she claims she gave to Edward Menaco.

Her petition, filed in Superior Court, charges Monaco came to her last March and offered to buy the rights to a $125,000 inheritance she expected to receive from the estate of her uncle, William H. Fahrney.

She agreed to sell, and received a check for $30,000 from one Harry Tollman, giving him a receipt for the check, she says.

She claims Tollman then took the check, saying he wanted to have it certified, and would loan her $5000 in exchange for a promissory note. She says she gave the note. Now she asks the return of the check and note.

STATE JOINS Mill Strike Parley

Agents of the Massachusetts State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration today joined representatives of the United States Department of Labor in seeking to end the strike of 3000 employes of the Uxbridge Worsted Co.

Horace A. Riviere, vice-president of the United Textile Workers, challenged a statement by the company that its employes, who are on strike in six plants in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut, received higher wages than other mill workers in similar jobs.

MOSES In Bullrushes OF CHI

NEW M'CORMICK SEEN AS LEADER

By Universal Service

Chicago, June 27—Chauncey McCormick, member of the famous harvester family, cousin of the late Senator Medill McCormick, made his first political speech and was immediately hailed by local Republican chiefs as the new Moses to dramatize the anti-Roosevelt campaign in these parts.

He climaxed a hard-hitting indictment of the Roosevelt-New Deal program with this:

"The choice put up to all of us is plain—free men or vassals. And our answer, if we have any courage left, should be Patrick Henry's 'Liberty or Death.'"

A large gathering of men and women at the round table cheered when he added:

"I suggest we tell the entire story in just two words: 'Save America!' Make no mistake about it, that is the great issue. Nothing else matters."

He suggested also a subsidiary slogan:

"Roosevelt, the repudiator."

Reviews Pledges

Reviewing a long list of 1932 pledges repudiated by both President Roosevelt and his aids, McCormick dramatically declared:

"They have repudiated Washington for Lenin, Jefferson for Stalin and Hamilton for Marx."

McCormick thanked God for President Angell of Yale University. A year ago, he said, the University conferred the degree of Doctor of Laws on President Roosevelt, but in his baccalaureate address this month President Angell, he said, made amends. He added:

"How well President Angell stated the American case was expressed in these words by William Randolph Hearst:

"'It condenses the case of Americanism versus Communism and Fascism in fewer and more penetrating words than has been done by any one since the current foreign insanities have gained a foothold in our political and educational institutions.'"

This Is Life

ROBERT E. ROGERS

Separated from my library, as I am this summer, I can't quote exactly, but I should like to give the substance at least of one of the most remarkable passages in Edmund Burke's writings, one which has a very specific application to the President's demand for what amounts to confiscatory taxation of large incomes and estates.

It contains food for thought, not merely for property holders, who will understand it clearly anyway, but in particular for the people of small incomes whose attitude towards the President's proposal is commonly that of profound indifference.

Robert E. Rogers

To them the increasing taxation in the higher brackets has no interest or meaning. On the whole they are probably inclined to think it a good thing. They may even believe that this "sharing the wealth" will help them. I say "sharing the wealth," for whether the President and Huey Long like it or not, that is the way the people at large are going to think of it.

What Burke, the most practical of political commentators, had to say about it follows:

Wealth is a sluggish and inactive principle always on the defensive against the active and aggressive principle which we call political demagogery. One of the chief means of advancement and power, in the mind of the man to whom politics is a career, is constant attack on great wealth. He pretends that such an attack is in favor of small wealth and small incomes.

Own Defense

But, says Burke, great wealth is the only principle able to stand off the aggressive attacks of the demagogue. Great wealth is like a rampart, stout, solid, strong, and able to defend itself—a ring of defense around the little blocks of wealth of little people.

Once that wall goes down before the attacks of the demagogues, then the little wealth will be open to the same attack, and having lost the protection of the legal organization of great wealth, will succumb to the same personal ambition and the same false philosophy of politics that has already destroyed the great fortunes. Great and small wealth alike will be liquidated and reduced to the dead level of state socialism or collectivism.

Burke didn't know those last two words, but he recognized the substance. He had seen the wealth of the nobles and the church confiscated in France; he had seen the wealth shared and the land distributed—the first experiments in what later was to be called collectivism. He would have understood perfectly what Huey Long and the President are trying to do. The principle he is attacking is as dangerous now as it was in 1792 and his warning is quite as valid today as it was then.

Private wealth is the chief protection of private liberty against the constant and encroachment of governmental power. Alexander Hamilton knew that. Once private profit is gone, as Rex Tugwell desires, and accumulation of capital by inheritance is gone, as Mr. Roosevelt desires, there will be no more reservoirs of capital to promote effective business and to provide useful employment. The sole source of capital and employment will be the state, and we shall see only such uses of capital as the T. V. A. and the Farm Relief, probably on a bigger scale, and we shall see only such employment, barren and futile, as the ERA has made us familiar with.

If the increased revenues from the taxation which Mr. Roosevelt wants jammed through in a few days or weeks were to be used substantially to balance the budget or lower taxation in the lower brackets one could find some defence. But even the most ignorant are well aware that it will be dribbled away in a thousand different ways to pay increased personnel, to further complicate and elaborate the machinery of government, to placate, if not to satisfy, politicians. Eventually, it will be as if these new and extravagant levies had never been laid.

Will Decide

Eventually the millions who will pay no taxes will, by their votes and mass influence, decide how these moneys shall be spent. In some new form of welfare, pensions and bonuses, no doubt. Representation without taxation!—the new slogan of the American people.

The most characteristic thing about the President's latest proposal is that it is being rushed through in such a hurry. It was hurry that made the NRA unconstitutional.

It is probably too much to hope that any taxation scheme, however fantastic and paralyzing in its effects, will ever be found unconstitutional. The Romans used to say, "pecunia non olet." Money does not stink. No, but the means by which it is raised may!

REID "FEARED TO IDENTIFY" PAIR IN MAIL ROBBERY

It was grim give and take at the federal court trial of the $129,000 Fall River mail robbery case today.

By exhaustive cross-examination, the defense battled to shake Mail Driver Herbert B. Reid's identification of three defendants, Thomas Dugan, John McGlone and Joseph Fisher.

Under questioning by William R. Scharton, counsel for the first-named pair, and John Crehan, for Fisher, Reid testified that he had not identified McGlone and Harrigan in New York because he "was afraid."

When he identified them here, they were handcuffed, he said.

TOLD FISHER WAS "BAD"

His identification of Fisher, he said, was made at the jail in Howard, R. I., after the defendant had been called from a group of 75 prisoners and after he had been told Fisher was a bad man.

Further pressed, he said he had told police after the robbery that he could not describe the gunmen, that one looked like a foreigner, and that he may have told reporters he could not describe them.

"Stand up, Sonny," Scharton ordered McGlone. McGlone stood, impassive.

"You didn't identify that man in New York did you?"

"No, sir," said Reid.

SCHARTON WARNED

The manner of Scharton's cross-examination brought this order from Judge Hugh D. McLellan:

"Don't argue with the witness and don't tell the witness what he ought to remember."

Reid said the two money packages were selected from 16 registered mail pouches he carried on the truck.

Once again the principal defendants were taken to court under a shotgun guard provided by Boston and Cambridge police.

On trial with Fisher, Dugan, McGlone as principals are Carl Rettico, Charles Harrigan and Herbert N. Hornstein, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Rubin are being tried as accessories.

Other witnesses were Russell Ainsworth, of Pawtucket, who came upon Reid after the robbery, and Fall River postoffice employes, Edward J. Blake, Stanley R. Dubile and Cornelius J. Harrington who placed the money on Reid's truck.

WATCHES AT BEDSIDE

Boy Who Shot Father in Mother's Defense Prays for His Life

A Natick high school junior and the mother he defended took up their vigil today at the bedside of the father he shot.

Roger Willis, 16, of Pine terrace, wants his father back. But it is not because a murder charge will be laid against him if his parent dies. He craves his father's companionship.

Elmer A. Willis, 42, a gassed World War veteran, and his wife were quarrelling. Roger tried to separate them.

Willis turned his rage on the son, threatened him with a beating and backed him into a corner.

Scarcely realizing what he was doing, Roger snatched open a drawer, seized a loaded .22 revolver and fired.

His father crumpled to the floor. He lay there as though he were dead.

The next few hours were a nightmare—doctors with sober faces, policemen with unending questions, his mother choking back her tears to tell officers that her son was a "good boy."

Then Roger was home again in the custody of his mother. But Willis hung today between life and death. If he dies, the law will call it murder. And Willis' condition is very low.

Bloodless Duel Hinted for Borotra, Tennis Star

By Associated Press

London, June 27—Jean Borotra, France's Bounding Basque of the tennis courts, assured the All-England Club officials today that he would not permit his dueling engagement in Paris to interfere with his scheduled appearances in the Wimbledon championships.

"One must fight as a point of honor," said Borotra, "but I also am honor-bound to play at Wimbledon, and that must come first."

Friends of Borotra, who accepted a challenge from Bidier Poulain, Paris newspaper tennis expert, disclosed that secret arrangements are being considered by the two men's seconds whereby both the principals would shoot in the air when they meet.

These friends said the situation had reached a point where the duel could not be avoided, and that, in the eyes of fifty million Frenchmen, nothing else would do.

Rene La Coste, a French tennis star, and General Pierre Alvin have been named as Borotra's seconds for the duel.

The question of weapons has not been settled. It was considered likely Borotra would have his choice and would name pistols rather than dueling swords.

Poulain was the champion swordsman of the French army until he took up the pen as tennis critic for the Paris Newspaper L'Auto.

"I've only fenced about 10 times in 20 years," Borotra said. "If I get my choice, I'll choose pistols, though I'm not much of shot either."

The sports writer accused Borotra of "setting France back," and issued his challenge after he said he had been insulted by the player's reply to the accusation.

1,000 Youngsters Converge On City for N. E. Camps

Bound for camps in northern New England, an army of more than 11,000 exuberant youngsters commenced pouring through Boston today over lines of the Boston and Maine and the Central railroads.

Within the coming week, 18 special trains and 35 extra sections of regular trains will carry the rollicking throng to the woods, lakes and the shore of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Massachusetts. The peak of the rush is expected on Monday and Tuesday, though the groups were scheduled to leave the North Station today.

In today's departures were girls bound for Camp Winnemont at Mount Whittier, N. H., and Camp Beaver at Rockland, Me.; and boys for Camp Wyanoke at Wolfeboro, N. H., Camp Mowglis at Bristol, N. H., and Camp DeWitt.

Later in the week solid trainloads of youngsters are due at New England camps from the West.

Boston and Maine officials said today that travel in the week before the Fourth is expected to exceed all records of the past few years.

BOY STOWAWAY On Fruit Liner

A young Central American stowaway who wanted to see the "Colossus of the North," arrived in port today on the United Fruit steamship San Bruno.

Jose Carbajal, 16, of Honduras hid aboard the ship at Puerto Barrios, Guatemala, and was discovered while at sea, under the canvas cover of a lifeboat.

He will be given a hearing today by a special board and will probably be ordered deported.

DIGHTON TRACK CAN CONTINUE

Dog racing will be permitted at the new Bristol County Kennel Club track in Dighton, near Taunton, until the supreme court considers and decides on its legality.

This solution of the situation, which was exclusively forecast last Saturday in the Boston Evening American, became a fact today.

Judge Donnelly in Suffolk Superior Court formally issued the injunction which he had promised, forbidding dog racing there, but immediately afterwards ordered that the injunction be set aside until the appeal is heard.

His Luck

By Associated Press

Chicago, June 27—Lemuel A Ervin wasn't nearly as lucky at law as in "craps."

Judge Rudolph Desort awarded Mrs. Alma M. Ervin half of the $4000 she said Lemuel won in a craps game, and gave her a divorce with it.

The judge, asserting he didn't shoot craps, said he would be willing to split $4000 won that way.

BOY, GIRL JOBS
All at Work in July

WOMAN NAMED CHIEF AID

By Associated Press

Washington, June 27—Leaders of the administration's $50,000,000 youth-training and job-supplying program say they will start the project in ten days.

President Roosevelt created the "Youth Administration" yesterday and placed Aubrey Williams, assistant relief administrator, and Miss Josephine Roche, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, in command.

A statement issued by Williams' office said detailed plans were not complete, but "it is certain that we will be well under way in 10 days, and, I hope, in full swing by mid-July."

The objectives announced by the White House are fourfold:

To give young men and women between 16 and 25 years work in private industry.

Train and retrain them for private employment.

Allow them to finish high school and college.

Supply them with work on relief projects.

Officials said state and local committees will be set to work with a national advisory committee to seek co-operation of industry, agriculture and commercial groups in finding employment and arranging private and public facilities for job-training at various trades.

Employers and local governments will be asked to apprentice youths with federal financial aid.

Williams, who has been in social work most of his life, is executive director of the new agency.

At the Treasury, Miss Roche is in charge of the public health service. She is from Colorado, where she has attracted attention as operator of a fuel company and as a candidate for governor of that state. She was defeated in the Democratic primaries.

Williams, who, like his chief, Harry L. Hopkins, "is in his early forties, has done practically everything, from sign-painting to preaching.

He has a degree from the University of Bordeaux. Before he came to Washington he organized the relief administrations in Texas and Mississippi.

2000 TO GET STATE JOBS

More than 2000 attendants, guards and other workers will be given jobs in state institutions by the passage of Governor Curley's bill to establish a 40-hour work week, it was said today.

The measure, despite an adverse report by the ways and means committee of the House, was brought out for action by a vote of 130 to 85.

If it gets final approval in both House and Senate, opponents argued, this measure will cost the state an additional $1,800,000 annually on its payroll.

Majority sentiment favors the bill. Representative Henry Cabot Lodge, staunch Republican, called it "meritorious." He added, however, that he would seek passage of an amendment providing that additional costs be not assessed on home owners through tax rates.

Blind Typist Seeks Prize

By Associated Press.

Chicago, June 27—An 18-year-old blind girl who writes and transcribes shorthand with as much speed and accuracy as stenographers with all their faculties was one of 350 high school and commercial college students gathering today for the third international commercial schools contests.

She is Jennie Kondrasky of Stamford, Conn., sightless from birth. She writes shorthand on a kind of Braille machine and "reads" her notes with her fingertips.

She was to compete in the transcribing machine contest, consisting of 10 minutes' transcription from dictaphone records with the prize to the stenographer writing the most words in the allotted time.

ACCIDENT PLEA IN GIRL SLAYING

By Associated Press

Peoria, Ill., June 27—Gerald Thompson, 25, in solitary confinement today awaiting trial July 22 on the charge of slaying Mildred Hallmark, 19, indicated his defense might be based on the plea that she was killed in a fall from his automobile.

Authorities said the prisoner, arraigned yesterday, had admitted attacking the girl, but denied that he struck her hard enough to injure her fatally while she resisted his attack.

"She must have killed herself in falling after I dumped her out of the car," Sheriff Marcus G. Olson quoted him.

Miss Hallmark's body, her neck broken and her clothing disarrayed, was found in Springdale cemetery. Thompson was arrested three days later and allegedly confessed attacking her.

Clad in a dirty shirt and rumpled trousers, Thompson did not make a formal plea in court.

Back in solitary confinement he called for a harmonica and between tunes told his guards that:

"If I get the chair I won't know anything about it—one jolt and it's over."

Boy's Slaying Still Mystery

Sanford, Me., June 27—What grounds police have to feel certain that 10-year-old Linwood Poole was murdered remain a mystery today.

But, authorities assert, they have no doubt that the boy, who disappeared from his home two years ago, was slain.

The youngster's body was unearthed in a sandpit at Sprinvale, only a mile from his father's home.

State troopers, called into the investigation by Police Chief Ernest L. Chadbourne, hinted at several clues, all pointing directly to murder.

Today there were a score of workmen sifting all the material in the sandpit where the body was found.

As yet there has been no cause of death given.

Clean Out Kidney Poisons

Wash Out Your 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes

If kidneys don't pass 3 pints a day and get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters may become clogged with poisonous waste and the danger of acid poisoning is greatly increased. Bladder passages are difficult, which often smart and burn like scalding water and cause discomfort.

This acid condition, brought about by poor kidney functions is a danger signal and may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

Most people watch their bowels which contain only 27 feet of intestines but neglect the kidneys which contain 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters. If these tubes or filters become clogged with poisons, it may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't run any risk. Make sure your kidneys empty 3 pints a day.

PROBE CLEARS CHICAGO U.; 2 'REDS' FLAYED

By International News Service

Chicago, June 27—The Stars and Stripes above the University of Chicago was officially free from any "Red" stain today.

A state senate committee reported after several weeks' investigation that charges of subversive and Communistic teachings on the campus were unfounded. It was recommended, however, that Professor Robert Morss Lovett of the English department be retired for his Communistic activities.

Professor Lovett denies being a Communist.

Professor Frederick L. Schuman of the political science department was let off with censure by the majority of the committee, for having participated in receptions for Communist political candidates.

REDS TO SPEAK

A dissenting minority report signed by Senator Charles W. Baker, charged Communism was not only tolerated on the campus but pervaded the classrooms.

When four of the five on the committee announced the report closed its investigation, Senator Baker promptly wired Congressman Samuel Dickstein of New York suggesting a Congressional inquiry.

He declared the school authorities are even now sponsoring a "Red Week" celebration with a program of speeches in one of the buildings by high officials of the Soviet government.

Among those who have spoken or will speak during the week are Ambassador Alexander A. Troyanovsky, Amtorg Chairman Ivan V. Boyeff and Vladamir Romm, special correspondent of the Soviet organ in Moscow.

CALLED "NOT LOYAL"

Professor Lovett was indicted by the committee in the following terms:

"He has pursued an unpatriotic course for eight or ten years. From the testimony and exhibits, Professor Lovett is not loyal to the United States or to Illinois."

It also mentions the fact that Lovett referred to all governments, including that of the United States, as "rotten." It cites his loss of a son during the World War, recalling his adherence to the so-called Oxford pledge against taking up arms in war.

The investigation was started after Charles R. Walgreen, chain store owner, withdrew his niece from the school and in an open letter to President Robert Maynard Hutchins charged she had been instilled with Communism while in class.

While giving weight to his documentary exhibits, the committee reported Walgreen's oral testimony failed to support his allegations.

BRIBERY BARED BY CLUBMAN

New Bedford, June 27—Five dollars a week went to Selectman Henry L. Guilbeault of Acushnet for having procured a liquor license for the "Red Barn," its proprietor, Frank Golen, testified in Superior Court here.

Golen so far has been the only witness at the trial of Selectman Guilbeault on bribery charges.

The witness, also involved in the bribery charges by the wording of the indictments, said he had evaded his town's rules against charging admission for dancing at his barn by selling flowers to dancers at 10 and 15 cents apiece.

These proceeds, in $5 instalments, went to Guilbeault, Golen stated, and besides that he had given Guilbeault a cow and three loads of fertilizer.

LOTTERY BILL Pushed by Kenney

Washington, June 27 (AP)—Representative Kenney (D.), New Jersey, will seek a vote this session on his plan to establish a national lottery and "take a billion dollars a year away from racketeers and gamblers."

He said today a House ways and means sub-committee would begin hearings Friday. The lottery would be patterned after Cuban lotteries with prizes offered monthly or even oftener.

Dionne Terms Rejected

By Universal Service

Toronto, Ont., June 27—Oliva Dionne, father of the quintuplets—and five other little Dionnes—is in favor of having his wife and 10 children under one roof, as proposed by the Canadian government.

But Papa Dionne wants full control of the "quins" together with the money they will earn from picture contracts, food indorsements and other avenues of revenue.

David Croll, Ontario welfare minister, so declared in telling of a letter he had received from the world's most famous father.

But Croll said that Papa Dionne's terms would not even be considered. Therefore the house the Canadian government planned to build for the 12 Dionnes will not be erected.

And the "quins" will remain wards of the king.

Both Papa and Mama Dionne have bitterly protested against the bill which took control of the quintuplets out of their hands and will have no more truck with the government until the bill is made null and void.

Driver Pinned Under Truck

A light bakery truck, in collision today with a 10-ton truck and trailer at Washington and Grove streets, West Roxbury, turned over three times and pinned the driver underneath.

But when Motorcycle Officer David Westhoff reached the scene and extricated the driver, they found he was only cut and bruised. He is Isadore Brooks, Maple street, Roxbury. He refused to go to a hospital.

The driver of the other truck, which was coming from New York, was Weston Draper of Jacobs place, Everett, according to the police.

Summer-time is play-time. Particularly for the children. Freedom from school and rules and nothing but sunshine and air.

But here's a little girl of three who can't frolic with her playmates because she is too delicate. And what is more, she can't even get the necessary sunshine to build up her fragile frame because mother can't buy a stroller for her.

Why? No money.

Dad is an ERA worker and things are difficult.

So, let's try to help little three-year-old and provide her with a stroller.

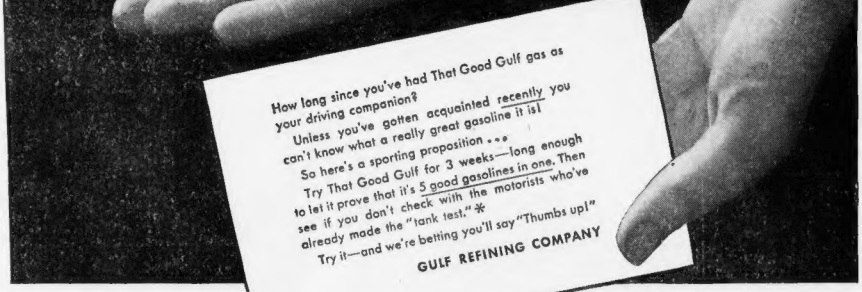
PUT YOUR CAR IN OUR HANDS for a 3-week "Tank Test"



How long since you've had That Good Gulf gas as your driving companion?

Unless you've gotten acquainted recently you can't know what a really great gasoline it is!

So here's a sporting proposition . . .

Try That Good Gulf for 3 weeks—long enough to let it prove that it's 5 good gasolines in one. Then see if you don't check with the motorists who've already made the "tank test." *

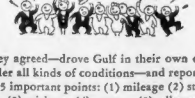
Try it—and we're betting you'll say "Thumbs up!"

GULF REFINING COMPANY

*750 Motorists said "You're On"—and Gulf Clicked!

TO GIVE you an idea of what you can expect from That Good Gulf Gasoline, we made this experiment . . .

We invited 750 motorists—average owners of average cars—to buy Gulf for 3 weeks and judge it themselves.



They agreed—drove Gulf in their own cars under all kinds of conditions—and reported on 5 important points: (1) mileage (2) starting (3) pick-up (4) power (5) all-around performance.

Seven out of ten voted Gulf superior on one or more of these points. Many voted a straight Gulf ticket—found it better in all 5 ways!

Gulf won because it's 5 good gasolines in one. It is controlled to such accurate refining limits that it gives you not 2 or 3 important qualities—but five!

Try it in your car for 3 weeks. We'll wager you'll climb on the Gulf bandwagon.

Betty Alden on 'Beacon Hill'

Lecture on World Cruise Attracts Fashionables

By Betty Alden

HATCHES were battened and the riding lights were set, on all the North Shore yachts, sail boats and dories last night while their owners crowded into the high school auditorium in Beverly to hear the recounting of the adventures of the schooner Yankee which recently sailed around the world to discover new and uncharted islands and visit strange places . . .

MARIAN McKEAN

The fact that two of their own group, Peer and Deborah Johnson, son and daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Peer P. Johnson of Beverly, were members of the amateur crew aboard the Yankee, made the lecture doubly inviting to the sea-going North Shore crowd, which is interested in anything which smacks of canvas and a salty breeze . . .

• • •

Hosts at Dinner

CAPTAIN IRVING JOHNSON, who skippered the Yankee on its world girdling journey, delivered the illustrated lecture, the proceeds of which were for the benefit of the Beverly Hospital Aid Association . . . He was introduced by Dr. Peer P. Johnson, who, with Mrs. Johnson, entertained at dinner in honor of the captain and his wife, earlier in the evening . . .

Mrs. Peer Johnson, attired in a flame colored lace gown under a black velvet wrap, and Mrs. Irving Johnson in a crisp taffeta frock of yellow and brown checks with a pleated ruffle at the hem, were accompanied to the lecture by the other dinner guests of the Johnsons . . .

Miss Deborah Johnson, who, during the course of the pictures was revealed to be the only white woman to have scaled the lofty peak of one of the remote islands in the Pacific, was there with her brother, renewing social acquaintances after their absence of 18 months on the cruise . . .

• • •

Notables Hear Lecture

THE LIST OF RESERVATIONS for the lecture read like a page from the social register of the North Shore . . . practically every one of consequence among the older crowd turned out but very few of the young set to whom such an adventurous and thrilling journey would be particularly interesting seemed to be there . . .

Marian McKean, a leader among the amateur sailors along the shore, was there however, accompanied by Nancy Leiter and Russell Burrage, Jr. . . . Elise Sortwell, who yesterday afternoon inaugurated a tennis class for girls on the courts of the Kendall Hall School, was with her mother . . . Elise is one of the new debutantes and judging by her activities is a bundle of energy . . . Her diminutive size and individuality are accented by a very severe coiffure and she wore a startling ensemble of black satin with a short white pique jacket, fitted snugly around her waist, and with full balloon sleeves . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Keith Merrill were accompanied by their two little daughters, Rosemary and Gene . . . Other members of the Ayer family, of which Mrs. Merrill is a daughter, were the Charles Fanning Ayers and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Ayer . . .

Mrs. Gordon Prince was there, too, and Mr. and Mrs. John Flint with a foursome of young marrieds . . . Mrs. Flint wore a powder blue satin gown with a simple white jacket . . . Mrs. Galbriath Mitchell was very attractive in a flowered taffeta dress with a gayly embroidered mandarin coat . . . Mrs. Albert Burrage, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pratt McKean, Mrs. Clifford Smith, and Mr. and Mrs. John Bethell were others who arrived with large parties of friends who had dinner together . . .

• • •

Mrs. Robert Steinert in Flowered Organdie

NANCY COCHRANE WORE a navy blue and yellow plaid taffeta frock . . . One of the loveliest frocks there was the pale green shirred chiffon with a peach color sash which Mrs. Samuel Newman wore . . . She was in a party including Mr. and Mrs. Robert Steinert, the latter in a summery flowered organdie, and Mrs. Alexander Steinert . . . Alice Thorndike was another fashionable in printed taffeta and Miss Barbara Gage, one of the members of the committee which sponsored the event, wore a simple black gown with rhinestone girdle and a crimson poppy at the bodice . . .

Mrs. Harold Jefferson Coolidge, Jr., whose evening ensembles, like those of Mrs. Ernest B. Dane, Jr., always seem to strike a note of individuality without being conspicuous, wore a white taffeta frock with diagonal stripes of pale gold and a short flaring coat of a deeper shade of gold taffeta . . . Mrs. Coolidge, Sr., wore a vividly embroidered wrap over a simple black chiffon gown . . . Norman Vaughan, another explorer, was there to listen with unusual interest to the tales of Captain Johnson . . . and Natalie Folsom, who, though extremely smart in a dark street suit, hesitated for a moment before taking a seat amidst such a dressy gathering . . .

No place could be gayer these early summer evenings than the Casino in Magnolia where an attractive crowd of merry-makers can be found every evening . . . Salty breezes blow in from the Reef of Norman's Woe to cool the far from woeful dancers and the new marine bar offers plenty of opportunity for those who want to have a real sailors' holiday . . .

Last evening, that popular debutante, Louise Stevens, was teamed by Lindsey Dexter and made a foursome with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Lentner Sewall . . . Rosamond Lockwood's husky crooning echoed through the rooms as she was applauded into singing one after another of her own compositions and the numbers she sang in the Vincent Ventures . . .

Caroline Hunnewell was escorted by a young Swiss gentleman who was her skiing companion on frequent occasions last winter in the Alps . . . Priscilla Dennett and Jack Goodrich were together and Betty Proctor were others merry-making a peppy parties . . .

Wedding

Louise Tarr Rockport Bride

MISS LOUISE TARR, daughter of one of Rockport's oldest and most notable families, was unattended as she pledged her marriage vows yesterday afternoon to Walter Duchatel Stockly, at a very informal garden wedding at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Hamilton Tarr.

She wore a tailored white crepe dress with an aquamarine blue jacket and a white picture hat.

Her mother's gown of pale gray chiffon blended softly with the shell pink lace gown which was worn by the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Walter D. Stockly of New York.

The Rev. George C. De Mott of Rockport read the marriage service and Mr. Tarr gave his daughter away. A wedding reception followed immediately after the ceremony.

Clinton G. Stockly of New York attended his brother as best man.

The bride is a graduate of the Walnut Hill School and since her graduation from Vassar in 1930 she has been news editor of an aviation magazine.

Mr. Stockly attended Mercersburg Academy and graduated in 1926 from Princeton University. After July 4th he and his bride will be at home on Fifth avenue, New York.

MILDRED MURPHY

Miss Parks Weds

THE MARRIAGE of Miss Celia McLain Parks, daughter of Mrs. Francis Temple Parks of Longwood avenue, and Mr. John Joseph Shaughnessey was solemnized this morning in the Church of Our Lady of Perpetual Help, in Roxbury, at nine o'clock.

Miss Mary E. Parks was maid of honor for her sister, Miss Frances Parks, Miss Kathleen Lamb, Miss Mary Brooks and Miss Beatrice McDermott attended as bridesmaids.

Mr. Joseph Coppenrath served as best man for Mr. Shaughnessey.

A reception was held at Longwood Towers after which Mr. and Mrs. Shaughnessey left for New York, and will sail on the Ile de France on Saturday for a two-month tour of Europe. While in Rome they will be granted an audience with Pope Pius XI.

Mr. Shaughnessey is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Shaughnessey of Roxbury.

Dutch Parties

Dutch treat parties will be the feature of the season's first dinner dance at the Eastern Yacht Club in Marblehead, which is to be held this evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Harris will bring a party of friends, and Mr. and Mrs. James C. Gray, Jr., will also bring a dutch party. Another group will come with Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Plimpton, and Mr. and Mrs. Walworth Pierce and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Brackett will also be present.

Evans-Scott Ceremony

WEARING HER MOTHER'S wedding dress of white satin trimmed with old lace, with a tulle veil falling from a small cap of the same lace, and carrying a bouquet of white orchids, Miss Mary Adams Scott was married in the First Parish Church in Framingham Center, yesterday afternoon, to Mr. E. Emerson Evans.

The Rev. Abbot Peterson of the First Parish Church in Brookline assisted the Rev. Ralph H. Baldwin of the First Parish Church in Framingham in performing the ceremony. Mr. George C. Scott gave his daughter away and there were no bridal attendants.

The ushers were Mr. Oliver K. Scott and Mr. George C. Scott, Jr., brothers of the bride, Mr. William S. Evans, and Mr. Lawrence Evans, brothers of the groom, Mr. John A. Dearth of Upton and Mr. Arthur W. Gregory, Jr., of Hartford, Conn., who is a cousin of the groom.

Following the ceremony an outdoor reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Scott received her guests in a blue and white chiffon dress, while Mrs. Evans, mother of the groom, chose green chiffon. Both mothers wore white flowers.

Mrs. Evans, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Scott of Framingham, made her debut in the 1927-28 season and is a member of the Junior League and the Vincent Club. She is a graduate of the Beaver Country Day School and the Cambridge School of Landscape Architecture.

Mr. Evans, who also lives in Framingham, is the son of Mrs. William E. Evans and the late Mr. Evans.

Common Fete Opens

Markers indicating historic spots on Boston Common were to be set out today as part of the tercentenary celebration on the Common. Further exercises were to be held at 9 Park street.

PIN HEAD Radio Shown

The smallest radio in the world, built on the head of a common pin, is on exhibition today at the "Open House and Exhibition" of the ERA reading and game room, 25 Holyoke street, South End.

It was built by Rufus Turner, 27, 10 years ago.

Lasker Praised

Former Assistant District Attorney David Lasker, of Suffolk County, was described by District Attorney William J. Foley as the ablest assistant he had ever had. The praise was contained in a speech made in his honor at a farewell banquet at the Hotel Bradford.

HOLLAND

KARLOFF In "The Raven" On Boston Screen

By GEORGE HOLLAND

More horror comes to our town this week, with Bela Lugosi and Boris Karloff blending their peculiar talents for "The Raven," one of the current films at the Keith Boston.

"The Raven," it is announced, was suggested by Edgar Allen Poe's poem of the same name.

George Holland

But the suggestion, it must be said in justice to both the film and the departed writer, is tenuous in the extreme.

Barring the recitation of a few lines by the mad Dr. Vollin, played with lamentable relish by Bela Lugosi, Poe's odd poem is noteworthily absent.

* * *

It is not just "The Raven" that makes Dr. Vollin that way, it appears. The "Tales of Horror," and even the love verses to Lenore—though Eulalie and Annabelle Lee are left to sulk unattended—have contributed to Dr. Vollin's gentle madness.

Accordingly, he gives a house party that is a veritable honey. Imagine the mortification of the hero, when, in answer to his beloved's scream, he bursts through her chamber door to find that the chamber has been lowered a half-dozen stories to the cellar, and he almost after it. Then to find the heroine's papa placed just where Poe's pendulum-axe will give him a neat, once-over with no hot towel, please. It's pretty tense.

Karloff, whose face the doctor has mutilated, comes to the rescue with a last-minute throwing of some very tricky-looking switches; and Vollin is left to be mashed to the traditional pulp in a contracting chamber.

But not before he has screamed, "Poe will be avenged!" Which leaves us to murmur: "He will indeed, my masters, he will indeed."

* * *

Will Direct

Rouben Mamoulian, director of the all-color "Becky Sharp," will go to New York late in the summer to begin direction for the Theater Guild's operatic version of the famous Negro play, "Porgy."

Shirley Temple to Be Starred in "Poor Little Rich Girl"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, June 27—The most famous curly-head in movies since Mary Pickford's curls twined around the hearts of the world is Shirley Temple. What could be more fitting, then, than for Shirley to be starred in Mary's one-time picture, "Poor Little Rich Girl?"

'Tis said that Winfield Sheehan paid Mary Pickford quite a fancy sum for the privilege of putting this past Pickford favorite on the screen.

Louella O. Parsons

Of course Shirley will sing. You just couldn't have a picture without her songs and Ann Ronnell is being brought to Fox to write the special lyrics for the child who cultivated the world. If there is ever another "America a Sweetheart," Shirley is certainly entitled to the name that has clung to Mary through the years.

* * *

Hurrying back to Hollywood is Kay Francis, called home from the pleasant task of vocationing by her boss, Hal Wallis, who is eager to get her started in "I Found Stella Parrish," her next picture. Kay will go into an immediate huddle with Orry Kelly, who has been asked to give her a special wardrobe for this actress role which calls for beautiful gowns worn with the Francis technique.

And here's something. Kay will have as her leading man Herbert Marshall, considered to be the most perfect speaking voice in captivity. If you want to learn how to talk properly for the screen or the radio just concentrate on Bart's diction.

* * *

Eddie Lowe breezed into town on a hurry call to report for "King Solomon of Broadway" at Universal. He has been visiting his two aunts up North and he says if he had stayed any longer he would have had to go on a six months' diet the way Aunt Kate and Aunt Mary fed him.

"King Solomon" is Eddie's newest and the way he has been winning favor lately it's certainly of interest. He has with him Dorothy Paige, who will sing, and Phinky Tomlin, who will also sing. Eddie won't sing but he will troupe and how! This is a Julius Bernstein production with Alan Crosland directing.

* * *

Ernst Lubitsch has no intention of spending a young fortune at Paramount before he gets started as a producer. He will take all of the pictures outlined before he was nominated head of production and put them on the screen before he buys any new stories.

John Otterson, the new president, went into the subject of coming Paramount pictures with both Lubitsch and Henry Herbrun, the new business head, and it was agreed that because of the valuable properties Paramount owns there would be no reckless expenditure of money for the time being.

* * *

The gayest Hollywood visitor to London these days is Helen Vinson, who goes everywhere with Frederick Perry, the British tennis champion. Helen has won a place for herself in the hearts of the staid Britishers, too, and as soon as she finished "The King of the Damned" for Michael Balcon she was immediately urged to remain and make another picture.

The temptation is great but at the same time London discovered the Vinson Hollywood suddenly took a second look at her and decided she had all it takes to play the "other woman" type of roles. So, Helen will listen to some of the excellent Hollywood offers.

Snapshots of Hollywood

ROSCOE ATES and his very newest girl-friend, LEONOLA JUMPS (honestly, that's her name), and her mother at the Club New Yorker; LEONOLA hails from Danville; wonder what ATES did with PAULINE MILAN, his former heart? SALLY O'NEIL has apparently said au revoir to TOMMY GUINAN and was seen at the same place with DAVE EISNER, a Los Angeles real estate broker; that sort of kills all the rumors that SALLY and TOMMY are married.

Put down as Hollywood's newest booster IRVING BERLIN; he is making his permanent home here and is completely sold on our town; JOEL McCREA, not yet a year old, is being trained in acrobatic stunts by his proud papa—FRANCES isn't so keen over son's talents, however; EDDIE ROBINSON knows all the tricks of gambling and he learned them from a professional gambler who taught him how to manipulate the cards and poker chips for "Barbary Coast"; DICK POWELL and FRANK BORZAGE and all the "Annapolis Farewell" crowd back looking like a million.

ROGER PRYOR home from the hospital; SPENCER TRACY looking at yachts; one week-end with MR. and MRS. TAY GARNETT and he decided that more and bigger boating was what he needed; keep your eye on ERROL FLYNN; the publicity he received when he married LILI DAMITA didn't do him any harm and WARNERS are now getting ready to give him a break; SALLY EILERS and BARBARA KENT playing golf at Bel Air; the PHIL BERGS (LEILA HYAMS) giving a party for BEBE DANIELS and BEN LYON and PAULINE and SKEETS GALLAGHER; PAULA STONE suffering with a sprained leg when she was thrown from a horse on location at Lone Pine. That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

LESLIE BANKS ROBERT COCHRANE MARTIN WALKER

Leslie Banks explains to his puzzled brother-officers, Robert Cochrane and Martin Walker, what clues he draws from an African war-shield in this scene from Edgar Wallace's "Sanders of the River," now at the Loew's State.

Favorites Of Screen Return

Kay Francis and George Brent are brought together again in "Stranded," new film which opens at the Metropolitan Theater tomorrow.

Frank Borzage has had the direction of the picture which was adapted by Delmer Daves from a story by Frank Wead and Ferdinand Reyher.

The story concerns the troubled love affair of a young assistant in the Travellers' Aid Society, Miss Francis, and her bridge-building sweetheart, George Brent.

Included in the supporting cast are Patricia Ellis, Robert Barrat, Barton MacLane, and Donald Woods.

The stage show is George Choos's "Dancing Honeymoon," featuring Neville Fleeson and Helene Denizon.

* * *

A new comedy-mystery, "Murder in the Fleet" with Robert Taylor and Jean Parker, takes over the screen of the Loew's Orpheum Theater tomorrow.

The new film deals with crime and mystery aboard a warship on visitors' day.

Five new acts of vaudeville this week feature Jerome Mann as the headline artist.

Captain John D. Craig's spectacular under-water film, "Sea Killers," comes to the Scollay Square Theater tomorrow. Captain Craig will deliver an introductory talk in person.

DESERT HERITAGE : Tale of Loot, Love, and Foreign Legion by Beau Geste Author : By P. C. Wren

Convicts in the Jungle Depths Feast on Roast Pig, Then Face Wild Indians

The Story So Far:

THE RETURN voyage of the S. S. Amazon from South America to England moves serenely until Manoel ("Spanish") Maine, sinister Spaniard, boards the ship at Bermuda. With intense jubilation he recognizes beautiful Consuela Vanbrugh as a character out of his shady past.

She is traveling with her wealthy brother, Otis. Another passenger is the prominent young Sir Harry Vane, who has fallen in love with Consuela.

They plan to marry in England. Spanish threatens to expose Consuela unless she pays heavily for his silence. Otis, who has never heard of the Spaniard, goes to his cabin to discover what's at the bottom of the fancied blackmail scheme.

Spanish tells him the story of his life, which is to lead up to Consuela's part in it: An aristocratic Spaniard, a victim of many dire misfortunes in his checkered career, he relates, all due to

He had enlisted in the Foreign Legion because of a murder at Heidelberg, escaped and enlisted again because of another turn of bad luck. This time he and another Legionnaire had murdered a pawnbroker and escaped with a fortune of £30,000 in jewels etc. In the Sahara his companion deserted him of the bottom of a well.

He was recaptured by Legionnaires, but not before hiding the treasure.

Sent to a desert chain gang, he was involved, against his will, in a convict uprising and sent to the terrible Maroni penal colony in South America.

Here, with another Spaniard, Miguel Braganso, he made a daring escape. Spanish continues his story with the pair free in the jungle.

Spanish Maine and his companion, from their hiding place, watch the Indians in their canoe.

WE WERE free—until we were recaptured; unseen, unheard, unimpeded, we were making our way, according to my calculation, pretty well due south, and parallel with the Maroni River.

So long as I kept the sun on my right shoulder, I knew I should be going roughly in the right direction, and that by bearing west as the sun set, we could, at any time, come to the river bank.

There again I have forgotten most of the details of that appalling time, that living death, that incredible nightmare journey.

Crossing the Sahara had been child's play compared with it. There the sand might be soft and deep, water non-existent, the sky a fiery furnace, the earth too hot to touch, and uniforms a living burial—but you could move forward unimpeded.

Here, for much of the time, we had to hack our way; literally make a way for ourselves where there was no way.

At others, when we were clear of hitherto unpenetrated and almost impenetrable virgin jungle, we came to vast swamps, shallow lakes and great expanses of mud; water-logged sodden tracts that were neither land nor water; and through these we had to wade, to plough, to swim, to splash our way as best we could, arriving at the more-or-less dry land on the other side, black, literally black, with foul and filthy slime, from head to foot.

WITHIN a fortnight or so of leaving Maroni, we looked scarcely human.

With hair and beards matted with mud; clad in tattered rags, the remnants of the clothes that had been almost torn from our bodies by the thorns; we fought our way through the jungle; filthy beyond description; haggard, emaciated, starving, fever-ridden wrecks; covered with suppurating sores where thorn-scratches had festered; our feet a mass of septic blisters; to say nothing of ulcers, boils, and a horrible rash induced by insect-bites, prickly heat, or poisonous condition of the blood due to the food we ate and the stagnant water that we drank.

We had devoured all our provisions and were subsisting on tropical fruit and such horrible things as lizards, grubs, mushroom-like fungi, leaves and roots.

It was a marvel we did not poison ourselves.

Nombre de Dios, by Miguel was strong! When, weakened by dysentery and a bout of malaria, I could not stand, much less march, he carried me on his back, staggering along for miles.

At length I could bear it no longer and decided that, whether far enough inland or not, we could now make for the Maroni, swim it, and, turning due west, cross the strip of Dutch Guiana that lies between that river and the Surinam.

There we must buy or steal a canoe, float down to Paramaribo, make good our tale, and take ship for anywhere. We would go by the very first ship that was leaving the port, no matter what its destination, provided it was not France or a French Colony.

THAT day, I do remember, because we had an extraordinary piece of good luck.

We found a priceless treasure—nothing more or less than a dead pig. Dead but scarcely cold.

Of what this little peccary had died—whether of a broken heart, poisonous berries, fast living, or snake-bite, we neither knew nor cared; but that day we feasted on roast pork, reckless as to consequences.

Consequences there were none, save renewed strength and vigor. Bearing such mortal remains as we had been unable to eat at one sitting, we pushed on, and before nightfall we reached the river.

Here we camped, finished the pig, slept, and in the morning, tied our precious matches on our heads, and swam across.

And once again Miguel's great strength saved my life.

Unable to swim another stroke, I clung to his shoulder; and, with redoubled vigor, he struck out and brought me safely ashore at a spot where, fortunately, the bank shelved to a little sand-pit.

The march across from the Maroni to the Surinam was but a renewal of the nightmare.

How long it took, I do not know. Looking back, it is like a dreadful dream wherein I was delirious, as, doubtless, for much of the time I was.

What I do remember clearly is our coming one evening upon the Surinam, and my being suddenly grabbed by Miguel and dragged down into the undergrowth.

There, in full sight, quite near to us, was a canoe, full of Indians.

We could scarcely believe our eyes, hardly dare to breathe.

Within a few yards of where we crouched, was the means of getting easily, quickly, safely to Paramaribo; of arriving there in the convincing role of intrepid but unfortunate explorers; the means of escape from this accursed land; of attaining liberty and happiness; of saving our skins.

To me that frail canoe represented wealth, joy, salvation, life itself.

What would be the best thing to do?

Hail them and offer money for a passage down the river?

Quite probably—if they were sufficiently civilized to understand and value paper money—they would take it and cut our throats.

If money were of no interest to them, could we make them understand that if they would take us down to Paramaribo we would reward them with whatever did interest them—guns, knives, tools, colored cloth, beads, mirrors, bottles of taffia, and such things as appeal to savages? Probably not.

Might the Dutch perhaps have made themselves so feared by the Indians that they would not dare to kill white men who fell into their hands? Probably not.

We were far—very far—from civilization and if these Indians knew anything about Europeans at all, it would be nothing in their favor, nothing to give them pause, nothing to deter them from killing us—with, or without torture.

What would be the best thing to do?

In a whisper, I put the question to Miguel.

Follow the fleeing convicts tomorrow as Spanish continues his tale. They steal a river craft, but new misfortune overtakes them.

De Valera Hails Owsley

By Associated Press.

Dublin, Irish Free State, June 27—Alvin M. Owsley of Dallas, Tex., former national commander of the American Legion, today was received by President Eamon De Valera, as United States minister to the Irish Free State.

President De Valera, receiving the minister in historic St. Patrick's Hall, told him the Irish people hold President Roosevelt in high regard and wish him long life, happiness and prosperity.

Owsley called the contribution of the Irish people to American history glorious, saying:

"We are joined in ancient ties of kinship and association which have proven to our high advantage."

Owsley was preceded into the castle by captain's guard of cavalry in gold and blue uniforms. On the streets outside were scattered Communist leaflets pleading "No welcome to Owsley, release Tom Mooney."

The leaflets asserted:

"Owsley does not represent the American people, thousands of whom are of our flesh and blood and are today lining up in bread lines in New York, Chicago, San Francisco and all over the United States."

PHONE COMPANY Called on Carpet

Washington, June 27 (INS)—The powerful American Telephone and Telegraph Company was hailed before the Federal Communications Commission today to explain and defend its tie-up with the British cable monopoly.

The British monopoly has operated to prevent establishment of direct telephone communication between the United States and continental capitals. All trans-Atlantic telephone business is now routed via London.

SAIL TREAT FOR 1500 CHILDREN

Approximately 1500 children will be guests of the Cape Cod Steamship Company aboard the S. S. Steel Pier on an all-day sail to Plymouth and back tomorrow, the Steel Pier leaving with its cargo of joyful kiddies at 10:30 a. m. from Commercial Wharf and returning at 6 p. m.

The journey has been arranged by the Boston Evening American. All the youngsters will be given box lunches and will be shown historical landmarks in Plymouth.

Groups from the Home of the Angel Guardian, Morgan Memorial, West End House, Burroughs Newsboy Foundation, Hecht House, St. Botolph School for Crippled Children, Young Israel, Mattapan Welfare, Private Orphanages, Dorchester Family Welfare, Roxbury Family Welfare and Peabody House will make the trip.

The Roxbury Post, American Legion band, composed of 40 pieces, will offer musical entertainment on the S. S. Steel Pier.

Paramount Baking, Swift & Co., Betty Alden, Bushway, Whiting, Stone and Forsyth, Drake's Bakery, Twitchell-Champlain, Cummings, Ness and Frank Archer Co. are concerns which have donated foodstuffs for the box lunches.

'TWO-GUN' BAKER Held for Grand Jury

Plymouth, June 27—James H. "Two-gun" Baker, former Quincy motorcycle officer, arraigned in district court here today on three counts of breaking and entering and larceny, was held in $500 for the grand jury. Baker furnished bail after spending the night in jail.

Linens and other household goods allegedly stolen from the summer cottage of Mrs. Isabelle Booth were recovered today at West Pond in a camp which police said Baker hired over the week-end.

ROXBURY GIRL Drinks Poison

After drinking a disinfectant solution in a Norfolk street, Roxbury, cleansing shop today, Miss Mildred Domofio, 20, of Norfolk street, was treated in City Hospital and later sent home.

Employes of the shop, attracted by her screams, found her lying on the floor with an empty bottle at her side.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

LAWRENCE SHAW, NATIONAL DIRECTOR

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

Opportunity with a large "O" is knocking at the door of every Junior Birdman and Birdwoman who has never won from fifth to first place in an official wing model plane contest.

This opportunity will be presented on Friday afternoon, July 26, when nearly 30 handsome prizes will be distributed to winners of a novice glider contest.

The contest will be limited to all-balsa gliders and will be open only to boys and girls who have never won a fifth to first place prize in an indoor or outdoor wing tournament.

The gliders must be made by the contestants and must have a wing span of no less than 12 nor more than 24 inches. The glider constructed step-by-step from Junior Birdmen Handbook No. 1 will be eligible.

Copies may be obtained for 10 cents apiece from the Junior Birdmen Library Bureau, 7 Central Park West, New York City. A copy sent for now will arrive in plenty of time to let contestants construct their craft by July 26.

Any number of gliders may be entered by each contestant, so start early and make more than one type that will fit these specifications.

Some novice, freed from self-consciousness of flying against experts, may establish a new record. Why not?

Prizes and further information will be given on the Junior Birdmen page in next Sunday's Boston Sunday Advertiser. Watch for it. Then get in and win.

12 ALLIED UNITS To Be Formed

Sponsorship of no fewer than 12 squadrons in the Roxbury and Dorchester districts is the aim of C. G. Mills of 664 Dudley st., Dorchester, who is furnishing clubroom, model building knowledge and guidance to these "Trading Post Airlines" squadrons formed within two weeks. Each group chooses its own names and insignias. The three existing groups are known as the "Black Hawks" (commander, Ralph Holland); the "Flying Horses" (commander, Lloyd Mc-Murrer) and the "Blue Eagles" (commander, Jack Casey).

• • •

The "Bayliss Pursuit" squadron of New Bedford is busy planning a celebration of the completion of their first year as a Junior Birdman squadron. During this year they have had many activities including model plane building, model plane flying contests, debates and talks on aviation, sports and rifle practice. The Junior Birdmen Air Course is studied each week by all members. Each one has earned his Eagle Bar and many have complete sets of Junior Birdmen handbooks and sweater emblems.

• • •

Robert Anderson is leading in the squadron points system adopted by the Flying Circus squadron of Leominster. The winner will be decided at the next meeting.

Records Asked In Mellon Case

Pittsburgh, June 27 (AP)—Robert H. Jackson, government counsel, asked a Federal court order today to force the $300,000,000 Union Trust Co. to produce certain records which he wants to use in the Andrew W. Mellon income tax case.

The bank's attorneys had refused to obey a subpoena issued by the Board of Tax Appeals hearing the case, contending the matter was privileged material between the bank and a client other than Mellon.

OUSTED LABOR Union Wins Suit

Pittsburgh, June 27 (AP)—Federal Judge Robert McVicar today ordered the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers to reinstate the "rank and file" Riverside (Cleveland) Lodge, ousted because of alleged insubordination and violation of by-laws.

The principal grounds of the expulsion order was attendance at a "rank and file" convention of Pittsburgh last February by officers of the lodge. The union claimed the meeting was sponsored by Communists.

WINE STOLEN Turns to Water!

Thieves were badly fooled when they stole two full wine barrels in Quincy early today.

The barrels were full of water.

They were on a truck in the rear of the New England Beverage Co. storehouse on the southern artery, kept there for ballast.

The thieves hauled another truck up and transferred them, obviously hard work, for the barrels, full, weigh considerable.

N.E. THOUSANDS WAIT PENSION LAW SIGNING

By the Pension Editor, Boston Evening American

Two questions asked by scores of pension inquirers are of such nature that the pension editor cannot possibly make a definite answer.

Many correspondents want to know:

"When does the new federal social-security act become effective?"

The answer to that query must necessarily be indefinite.

It will not become effective until signed by President Roosevelt and until the Massachusetts Legislature enacts a law conforming with that of the national government.

This will probably take several months. As yet the bill has not been sent to the President by Congress.

Dozens of needy aged persons wish to know how much they will receive. That depends upon circumstances, which will be investigated by the old-age assistance bureaus.

QUERIES ASKED

Today's queries:

Q—I am a Gold Star mother, but not a citizen. Having given up a son in the last great war. Am I eligible for the new pension? —Mrs. D. R., Roslindale.

A—The pension act positively requires citizenship. You can, however, get a war widows' pension.

Q—I am a helpless invalid. Will I get extra money for medical treatment?—L. P., Concord.

A—Medical attention is furnished free.

Q—Where do I apply for the new pension?—R. S., Roxbury.

A—Through the regular local old-age assistance bureau.

Q—My mother, a woman of 78 years of age, has lived here in Bridgewater for 18 years. For two years previous to her coming here she lived in Millis, but because the doctor who treated her in Millis is dead, she cannot produce acceptable proof that she did live in Millis for two years. Thus she cannot prove 20 years' residence under the Massachusetts pension act. What should she do?—Mrs. A. V., Bridgewater.

A—The new pension act requires a residence of five of the preceding nine years. Therefore, the residence difficulty will be eliminated in her case.

Q—Do you believe Massachusetts will pass a bill to conform with that of the national government and so lower the requirements? —Mrs. E. D., Salisbury.

A—Yes. There is already a bill in the Legislature ready to be acted upon, as soon as Congress sends its act to the President to be signed.

JAPAN, CHINA CALL TRUCE

Peiping, China, June 27 (AP)—The Japanese military announced today that the Chahar incident has been completely settled.

Chinese authorities were silent concerning the announced settlement, but the Japanese statement was considered an indication that the Chinese had capitulated to the demands of the Japanese military.

The settlement of this incident, however, was but a minor phase in the general Sino-Japanese North China crisis, liquidation of which has been proceeding, with much accomplished but with much remaining undone.

Youth Seized in Nurse Attack

Worcester, June 27—Two State troopers left today for Oneida, N. Y., to return Wallace Geary, 35, of Worcester, for arraignment in Orange on charges of abducting and attempting to attack a nurse.

Geary was arrested in Oneida last night, and State police today received word that he would waive extradition.

Last Saturday, police allege, Geary went to Auburn and carried Miss Sophie Dana, 25, in his car to North Dana on the pretense that he wished to employ her as a nurse for his wife.

Geary is also wanted in Winchester, N. H., on a similar charge, police said.

SILVER CITY Swept by Flames

Silver City, Nev., June 27 (AP)—A third of this old community of the historic Comstock lode bonanza days was in ashes today after a fire which swept through the main business district and caused the death of one man.

The fire razed 11 buildings. Loss was estimated at about $40,000.

OATH BILL SEEN AS EFFECTIVE

Legislative leaders in the successful fight to enact a teachers' oath law today scoffed at suggestions that the lack of a penalty clause would render the law ineffective.

Proponents of the measure said they were well aware there was no penalty clause in the bill and they purposely left it out, knowing that they had the full force of public opinion in general behind the measure.

Reports that must be made to the State commissioner of education by all schools and colleges will reveal any failure to comply with the law.

But no one will be able to aspire to martyrdom by going to jail for it.

"If a penalty clause is necessary, we'll tack one on, but we don't think there will be any need of it," said Senator Charles G. Miles of Brockton.

VAGRANT BOLT Does Her Washing

Central City, Neb., June 27 (AP)—A thunder clap awakened Mrs. Henry Fuchrer. Then she heard a thumping sound which continued for some time.

Investigating, she found her electric washing machine in operation, apparently started by the lightning bolt.

"The GUEST TEST opened my Eyes!"
1 "Which will you have?"
2 "9 out of 10 times—the answer was the same!"
3 "Now I'd be ashamed to serve anything but Seagram's!"

Maybe the "Guest Test" will surprise you. Maybe it will open your eyes! It's the Jair test for whiskey. Try it yourself.

When friends drop in, offer them two whiskies, Seagram's Crown and any other. See which they choose.

Perhaps they'll like a less expensive whiskey. Perhaps a more expensive whiskey. But more than likely they will choose Seagram's. Seagram's Crown is America's favorite whiskey.

Crown whiskies are blended the Seagram way. That's why they taste better. The difference in price is slight — the difference in taste is great.

30,000 TO SEE DANNO AND LONDOS

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS
NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER
BOSTON, THURSDAY, JUNE 27, 1935 11

AUSTEN LAKE

Essay on Picking A Winner— Danno vs. Jimmy

I DOUBT THAT THE ruling powers of wrestling will be impudent enough to attempt another world championship tie tonight when Christopher Theophilo, called Jimmy Londos, meets Dan Ohmy-honey, at Fenway's green pasture.

Austen Lake

Having perpetrated the plot twice last year, once in Boston and again in Buffalo, when Londos and Ed George thrashed around the floor for three hours until the janitor swept them out just as the shellpinks of early dawn were brushing the East, I don't think the powers would be so bold as to dig up the hackneyed script all over again.

But the mat comptrollers are pretty presumptuous, even among athletic people, which, as a set, are capable of some pretty audacious mockeries.

There are all the elements of good fiction in this evening's frolic, beginning with the gradual crescendo of suspense and the artful web of mystery that leads to the final denouement or climax.

Usually in such literary forms, the guilty party, corresponding with tonight's winner, is the least suspicious person in the plot.

I have been fumbling my under lip for a long time over the probabilities in tonight's drama and have fitted together a mental mosaic from such bits of reasoning as this:

(1) Londos has a big, super-world title match with Chief Little Wolf in the Yankee Stadium next Tuesday which, without his title, would not draw moth-millers to the scaffold lights.

(2) The two existing regional world titles, held by Londos in New York and George in New England, are vital to the best commercial interests of the industry.

(3) O'Mahoney, as heir to Londos' half of the highest wrestling bauble, is a minor league attraction in New York, where M. Jacques Curley and Londos are joint maestros.

(4) Londos is an acute business man, a shrewd bargainer, and a dollar sweetheart.

(5) Physically, he is able to ward off a title snatch.

* * *

Pieces That Don't Fit

I AM PREPARED TO eat my opinion, which is, by hook or otherwise, that Londos will throw O'Mahoney after a deathless struggle in which something fantastic should happen.

This is just the speculation of one who has not been invited behind the scenes, or pre-read the evening's manuscript.

Still I find, after fitting this picture together, there are some odd fragments left over which may turn out to be key-pieces to a reverse pattern.

(1) Danno, beaten, may dispel the illusion and damage his drawing power.

(2) Londos is approaching his professional autumn, with a scad of profits, and may be ready to barter his crown, as Straugler Lewis originally bartered his to Sonnenberg.

(3) With a George-O'Mahoney carnival coming up later this summer, the ideal wrap-up would be with Danno as world champion of New York and Londos as world champ of Boston. There is a gold mine in it.

(4) The Powers, in their infinite wisdom, may deem the return to one omnipotent champion, as in the old pre-Sonnenberg day, as a health giving tonic to the profession.

I would teeter between these opposite poles of wonderment, were it not for the widely publisized date that Jimmy has with Chief Little Wolf down New York way on July the Twoth, which is being thumped up as a priceless terrestrial conflict between the mastodons of the mat.

Well, a fellow can't go around being right all the time, so, for better or for worse, as the marriage service says, I will take Londos until Danno do us part. (Heh! Heh!) Unless they tie again in one of those unbreakable pretzel knots.

* * *

The Friendly Art of Make Believe

THERE IS NOTHING like a bold, boisterous, hilarious sport mystery to warm the cockles of the customer's heart and tone up his whole spending system. Because the scornful cynic is often the best customer for the object of his ridicule.

It is fashionable and pious to abhor deceit and I suspect that, for one, I have feigned to do this while actually enjoying the conspiracy and have come away from the scene glowing with virtue for my shrewdness in detecting the plot.

It is a feeling that is very good for a man, because there are some of us who reside so close to the spiritual sub-levels that a counterfeit is the only thing we can look down upon.

Now, mind you, I do not, for one moment, mean to imply that either Londos or O'Mahoney, who are both nice, mannerly fellows, are entered into a humbug.

When Primo Carnera, in his original petition in bankruptcy, depicted himself not as a contestant but as an exhibitor, it clearly implied that he had no responsibility to struggle authentically.

And it is my impression that, by Massachusetts' law, all wrestlers are obliged to regard themselves and their works as exhibitions.

* * *

In Praise of Folly

THE BEST IN ANY performance is always the studied and not the extemporaneous, which is one of the vital faults with the prize fight business, where sincere struggles between finely trained, trim athletes run together in a commonplace smudge, with the memory retaining no clear detail.

The artificial is, by contrast, the more lasting and is apt to be stored in the treasure house of human memory as a jem of harmless mischief long after the recollection of virtue has faded.

If Dean Frederick Rand Rogers of Boston University is right in saying that competitive sport has a sinister influence on the athletes, where the winner is constantly taking something away from the loser and thereby shocking his confidence, then professional wrestling holds the answer.

I am sure that the pro matmen, as brothers of the same lodge, derive genuine pleasure from their struggles and suffer no loss to their ideals by rounds of friendly make-believe. Their mutual tolerance is one of the charms of their art.

So, after mulling the situation over, maybe I will take Danno instead of Jimmy as my tonight's pick. I don't know.

You don't suppose the powers would be saucy enough to dig up that 1934 Londos-George script again, when the boys fought three hours to a standstill?

Scowls are exchanged by O'Mahoney and Londos, heavyweight mat foes, as they meet during weighing-in ceremonies for their title bout tonight at Fenway Park. Dr. Sullivan seems unconcerned, but there's plenty of menace in the glances sullenly swapped by the two giants. Londos weighed 205, Danno 222, and both were in tip top condition. Their bout tonight is due to be one of the season's best.

Joe Louis Walloped in First Start as Amateur

This is the second of a series of articles by Jack Conway giving the story of the spectacular rise to ring fame by Joe Louis, Detroit Bomber.

By Jack Conway

Joe Louis, whose real name is Joseph Louis Barrow, didn't take up boxing as a result of any well developed plan. His entrance into the ring game was due to accident.

At the age of 14 Joe entered the Bronson Trade School in Detroit. He wanted to become a cabinet maker. When he was 16 years of age, Thurston McKinney, a member of the school, asked him to go to a gym with him.

"I am going to box in an amateur tournament," said McKinney, "and I want you to help me train."

Joe had never donned a pair of boxing gloves, but he hadn't any objections to doing so. He went to the gym with McKinney and took quite a cuffing. He didn't know how to defend himself but he did know how to hit.

In sheer desperation he cut loose with a terrific overhand right hand punch. The blow landed flush on McKinney's jaw. The latter hung on to the ropes and was fortunate to avoid being knocked out.

Louis liked boxing and was a [illegible] at the gym.

He did considerable training and finally entered a tournament that was being staged by the Detroit A. A.

Joe was matched with Johnny Miller, an amateur boxer who had considerable experience.

The gong sounded for the opening of the first round. Joe, who was battling under the name of Barrow, extended his right hand to Miler.

The latter took advantage of Joe's lack of experience by shooting a terrific right-hand punch to the jaw.

Joe went to the canvas and was in a dazed condition when he regained his feet. In all he was dropped six times during that wild first round.

Joe does not remember how often he hit the canvas in the second session, but he was still in there fighting when the gong sounded for the opening of the third round.

Joe fought desperately. He carried the battle to Miler. He lost the decision, but had the satisfaction of knowing he could come back fighting after taking heavy punishment.

Defeat failed to discourage Joe. He returned to the amateur boxing wars three weeks later. He had shortened his name, and became known as Joe Louis. He was matched to appear at the Forest Club in Detroit.

He doesn't remember the name of his opponent, but he does recall that he didn't do any handshaking this time. He came out of his corner fighting and [illegible] a quick knockout.

This started a long [illegible] stories. Soon Louis [illegible] 13 straight knockouts and [illegible] as one of the best amateur boxers in the Middle West.

Joe was then sent into action against Clinton Bridges, who is still one of the best amateur boxers in this country. Bridges had too much skill and experience for Louis, and was awarded the decision at the end of three rounds of milling.

Louis didn't permit this setback to upset him. He says Bridges proved to him he still needed to master a great deal about the fundamentals of boxing.

He spent hours training in the gym, and became more determined than ever to reach the fistic heights.

Joe ran up a new list of knockout victories, and in 1933 came to Boston to compete in the national [illegible] at Reading.

Joe won a few more bouts, and was hailed as a star amateur. He got careless in his training, and was not in the best of condition when called upon to meet Stanley Evans, Detroit light heavyweight.

The result was Louis was beaten. It was the third defeat he had suffered. This was the last setback suffered by Joe. In 1934 he secured a return bout with Evans and conquered him.

Jack Conway will have another article on Joe Louis in tomorrow Boston Evening American.

Youth, Veteran In Death Grip

Battle of Mat Titans Will Attract Gate of $60,000

By Jack Conway

Dan O'Mahoney, Irish heavyweight wrestling champion, and Jim Londos, recognized as world champion in 38 states, will toss their futures into the laps of the gods when they clash in a finish bout, best two falls out of three, at a Crosscup-Pishon Post show at Fenway Park tonight.

It is New England's Battle of a Century and will attract a crowd of 30,000. The gate receipts will run close to $60,000.

O'Mahoney will enter the ring with 39 straight victories to his credit since he came to the United States. Londos will have a background of not having been defeated for three years.

It will be another battle between Youth and Experience. O'Mahoney, the flush of youth still on his Irish cheeks, is only 23 years old. Londos, a veteran of thousands of mat battles, is 38 years old.

Danno is fighting to break down the barrier that bars him from the championship he seeks. Londos is fighting with all his ring craft and strength to retain his position as champion in 38 states.

GEORGE HERE

Londos has greater national and international standing than Ed Don George, who is recognized as champion in New England. George will be at the ringside tonight to get a peek at Londos and O'Mahoney as he will eventually be called upon to meet the winner.

O'Mahoney will have the physical advantages on his side tonight. The spectacular Celt weighs 224 pounds against Londos' 204 pounds, a difference of 20 pounds.

O'Mahoney is six inches taller than Londos, and he believes this advantage will help wear Londos down in the event it is a long battle.

It is expected that each wrestler will try for a quick victory in straight falls. Londos, the veteran, realizes the longer the contest goes the better it will be for Danno.

When the latter first started wrestling in this country, many persons questioned his ability to maintain a fast pace in a long contest. In defeating Henri DeGlane in a bout that lasted for more than an hour, the Irish champion proved he is tireless.

O'Mahoney will rely upon his famous "Irish Whip" to down Londos, while the latter has a varied assortment of holds which he will use against Danno.

Ted Tonneman of Chicago, one of the most able referees in the country, will be the third man in the ring when O'Mahoney and Londos sweep into action.

Tonneman was the selection of Paul Bowser, Jim Londos and Jack McGrath, the latter acting for O'Mahoney.

BAND CONCERTS

The Crosscup-Pishon Post, for whose benefit the bout is being staged, has announced a long list of features, starting shortly after six when the gates of Fenway Park will be swung open.

At 7:30 there will be a volley by a squad of soldiers and a band concert. Fifteen minutes later a drum and bugle corps will take over the spotlight and at 7:55 there will be a second band concert.

Just before the semifinal Adrian O'Brien, famed tenor, will sing old ballads of Erin.

Following the semifinal taps will be blown in honor of departed war heroes, the Star Spangled Banner will be played and James Harkins, noted New York singer, will render several selections.

The first bout will enter the ring at exactly 8 o'clock and the main event will begin sharply at 10.

Statements

Danno, Jee-mee Both Confident

LONDOS

I know I am in for one of the hardest bouts I have encountered in recent years. I realize O'Mahoney will have the weight, youth and perhaps strength in his advantage, but I think my experience will be the selling factor in the long run.

O'MAHONEY

I am positive I will win and take the world title back to Ireland. I was never in such remarkable physical condition in my life. My youth and strength will enable me to carry the battle to Londos all the way. I feel confident I can tire him and soften him up for the Irish Whip. When I do, it's good day for him.

Cool Wool

It's no secret! Long before the Pyramids, men wore wool to keep cool, as well as warm!

To this day, the flowing white robes of desert tribesmen are made of wool—protection from the blazing heat of noonday—and from the quick after-sun-down chill.

In Summer, Boston is a tropical country.

Tropical worsteds are a "natural."

BOUNDING COUNT IN 6TH BEST

Squeeze Out Ace in 1st Number

By DAVE WILSON
(selections made for fast track)

BEST BET—BOUNDING COUNT

Narragansett Park, June 27—Bounding Count appears to stand out like the proverbial lighthouse over an indifferent lot of platers opposing him in the mile and a sixteenth of the sixth number here tomorrow afternoon.

The speedy Bounding Count is coming off several good efforts in such company and apparently needs only a listening ride on a fast to insure brackets.

FIRST—SQUEEZE OUT, SUN TEATIME, CATHOP

SQUEEZE OUT figures to stand a world of beating here if she gets prepared. The Jere Valentine four-year-old is a fast-improving sort and [illegible] SUN TEATIME, another up of [illegible] seems a cinch over the field to fear on the strength of that effort. CATHOP [illegible] He can take it all up to 3 1-16.

SECOND—SIR ROLLIE, ONUS, ARGOAN

[illegible] ONUS [illegible] SIR ROLLIE [illegible] ONUS drubbed the top one last time out but [illegible] was on a heavy track. ARGOAN'S last race [illegible] He didn't like the heavy going.

THIRD—DE VALERA, STEP AWAY, BENARES

DE VALERA, beaten an eyelash by All Hail last trip, has only to duplicate that last performance in order to grace the winner's circle in [illegible] STEP AWAY [illegible] BENARES [illegible] Both have been [illegible] under burden of 118 pounds.

FOURTH—MOANE KEALA, WESTY'S JUNIOR, SABLIN

MOANE KEALA is well suited by all the conditions in this wide-open affair. Under the feather impost of 106 pounds, she figures to be hard to down. WESTY'S JUNIOR finished only a nose in back of the top one in their last meeting, and again shapes up as the main danger. SABLIN turned in a corking second to Albuquerque last time.

FIFTH—POLYDORUS, GOLDEN SPUR, MOLLY GREENOCK

SIXTH RACE—BOUNDING COUNT, METTLE, GIFTED LADY

BOUNDING COUNT is at home in any sort of going, so we'd have nothing for [illegible] comes up. If anything upsets my dope and [illegible] in a drubbing it will have to be METTLE. The latter is coming up sharp as a tack. GIFTED LADY merits serious consideration on her last victory at six furlongs.

SEVENTH—GENERAL A. POCKET, ZULU LAD

Have a hunch that GENERAL A will be a mighty hard thoroughbred to down here. POCKET off general form shapes up as the probable favorite as the one to fear. ZULU LAD is a strong possibility.

PICARD SHOOTS SUB-PAR GOLF

N. L. Umpires MYOPIC

FRICK SHOULD CLEAN HOUSE

By Joe Cashman

Manager Bill McKechnie had the distinction of being chased from the same game twice in the opener of the Wednesday twin-bill.

His most legitimate protest over Pirate Pep Young being allowed a home run on his third-inning drive which sailed over the wall a yard or more foul, brought the Tribal pilot banishment from Umpire Magerkurth.

A while later Umpire Barr waved him off the field.

"You're out of the game," bellowed Barr.

"No you're just finding that out," replied Wilkinsburg Will in his most sarcastic Scotch burr. "Magerkurth chased me five minutes ago."

McKechnie will be fortunate if he escapes a suspension for his outburst.

It would be much better for baseball, however, if President Ford Frick of the National League spent more time looking for efficient umpires and less in punishing players and managers to cover up the rank errors of his umpires.

RAB CALLS ONE

There was absolutely no question about Young's drive being foul by a wide margin. But the decision of the myopic "ump" was merely in keeping with the way they have been missing plays right and left all over the circuit this year.

Magerkurth, for instance, robbed both Mel Ott and Mark Koenig of homers on the Giants' last visit to the Wigwam.

Both Bill Terry and Frankie Frisch have publicly criticized the arbiters in open letters to Frick, and almost every other boss in the league has made private complaints.

All the pilots can't be wrong and all the umpires right.

Bosses like McKechnie and Terry are noted for their calmness and fairness so far as adverse decisions are concerned. When they pop off, you can set it down that the umpiring is very putrid indeed.

McKechnie's banishment indirectly led to another lively argument.

Rabbit Maranville, taking Bill's place on the third-base coaching lines, protested that Guy Bush, Pirate hurler, was standing illegally on the rubber. Umpires Klem and Barr agreed.

Bush had so much trouble standing the way he was instructed that at first he had to omit his windup to satisfy.

Maybe the delivery is illegal, but he's been throwing the same way for over ten years without a warning from any arbiter.

The disputed home run, coming with a man on base, proved to be the Pirates' margin of victory in the opener, as Bush bested Ben Cantwell, 4 to 2.

Wally Berger hit his 14th home run in the sixth inning of the opener. He needed it to remain tied for second place in the race for Mel Ott of the Giants and Dolph Camilli of the Phillies each hit No. 14.

GIANTS AGAIN

Bill Swift, returning with only a two-day rest after winning the first game of Sunday's twin-bill, let the Warriors down with four hits in the nightcap to give his mates their fourth win in five starts at the Wigwam. He also contributed two doubles to the Bucs' attack.

Littie Lloyd Waner had a busy day. He pulled down nine Tribal hoists in the opener and eight more in the nightcap.

Wally Berger had eight put-outs in the first game, including one of the greatest catches ever made on the field when he made a running, leaping catch of a line drive to left center by Paul Waner in the opening frame.

Former Cape Golfer's Putter Working Fine

EZAR TOTALS 151

By F. A. Wray
International News Service Sports Writer

Muirfield, Scotland, June 27—Henry Picard, willowy young American from Hershey, Pa., today came rushing home through the final holes in a sub-par 34 to score a 73 in the second round of the British open golf championship and range well up with the pace at 149. He had a par 72 yesterday, four strokes behind the leader, Henry Cotton, and three behind the next two, MacDonald Smith and Alf Perry.

He almost caught Perry, whose 75 today left him in temporary possession of the lead at 36 holes with a total of 144, while Smith was none too impressive over the first nine this morning, taking 38 strokes. Cotton, meanwhile, was scheduled for a late start.

Tied with Picard at 145 were Aubrey Boomer, France, and Robert Sweeney, American amateur who resides in England. Boomer vouchsafed the low round of the day so far, a 69, while Sweeney, going to the turn in a sparkling 35, finally finished with a 73.

Birdie in Ninth

He played the first eight holes in perfect para and then shot a birdie at the ninth.

The cards of the two Americans follow.

Picard:
Out . 5 4 5 3 5 4 3 5 5—39
In . . 4 3 4 2 5 4 3 4 5—34—73—145

Sweeney:
Out . 4 4 4 3 5 4 3 4 4—35
In . . 5 4 4 3 5 4 3 5 5—38—73—145

Boomer's 69 was made possible by a remarkable performance over the final eight holes which were negotiated in three under par, with birdies at the 11th, 15th and 18th and para the rest of the way. In all, he had five birdies during the round and missed par only at the fourth and tenth.

Boomer's card:
Out . 3 4 4 4 5 4 3 5 5—35
In . . . 5 3 4 3 3 3 3 5 3—34—69—145

He started the day behind a 76 in the first round yesterday.

Putter Working

Picard's revival on the back nine can be traced to a return of his putting touch, for he sank long ones for birdies at the 11th and 13th and, except at the home hole, was putting for birdies all the way.

Joe Ezar of Texas then came home in 39, three over par, to score a 75 for the second round, giving him a two-day total of 151. He missed par at the 10th, 13th, 15th and 16th, but managed to save a stroke by getting a birdie 3 at the home hole.

Ezar's card:
Out . . . . 5 3 4 3 5 4 3 4 5—36
In . . . . . 5 4 4 4 5 5 4 5 3—39—75—151

Meantime, E. F. Hill took a 76 for 153; Dick Burton a 78 for 154; Archie Compston a 74 for 149; H. W. Myers a 73 for 147; Len Holland a 74 for 146, and W. E. Brown a 78 for 152.

P. B. Lucas was among the early leaders with his 72, one over par, for a total of 147.

Smith Loses Ground

MacDonald Smith came home with a 77 for a total of 146, placing himself far behind the pace. The veteran's play furnished a pitiful contrast to his 69 of yesterday, the performance being climaxed by a 6 at the seventh and a 5 at the 18th.

Smith's card:
Out . . 5 4 4 3 5 5 3 4 4—38
In . . . 4 4 4 3 5 5 3 3 5—39—77—146

C. A. Whitcombe played magnificently, his only error coming at the 17th, where he three-putted.

His card:
Out . . 4 3 3 3 4 5 3 4 4—33
In . . . 4 6 4 4 3 4 4 3 5—35—68—139

A few minutes later, another Englishman, William Cox, shot a 69 to go into a tie with Boomer, Picard and Sweeney at 145.

His card:
Out . . 5 3 4 4 4 4 3 3 4—34
In . . . 4 4 4 3 5 5 3 4 4—35—69—145

Little Recovers

Lawson Little also recovered lost ground when he came in with a 35-36—71, one under par, for a two-day aggregate of 146, seven strokes behind the lead. The American played seven of the last nine holes in par, had a birdie at the long fourteenth and missed par once, at the sixteenth.

His card:
Out . . . . 4 4 5 4 4 3 4 4 4—36
In . . . . 4 4 4 3 5 4 4 5 4—36—71

Henry Cotton, the champion, whom all are watching anxiously started off surrounded by a gallery of 4000 and promptly shot two pars and a birdie on the first three holes to add to his leading 68 of yesterday. He, however, lost a stroke to par at the short fourth and then followed with a par 5 at the fifth.

FUN MISSING, SAYS EX-STAR

By Associated Press

Los Angeles, June 27—Big Jim Thorpe, the Indian super-athlete of two decades ago, is harboring just one secret sorrow.

It comes from envying Jesse Owens.

Seldom given to vain regrets of any sort, big Jim wishes he were 20 years younger, 50 pounds lighter, and otherwise eligible to tackle the lithe Ohio Negro, whose exploits are dimming the brilliance of his own, in a two-man track meet, with no events barred.

"I'd beat him," rumbled big Jim, his vast chest swelling belligerently. "Yes, sir, I sure would, and I tell you why:

Never Tried Hard

"In my day, we didn't think about records. We ran or jumped or threw the weights to win. When somebody pressed me, I set a record; when they didn't, I just won. So, my best marks don't mean a thing. They weren't the best I could do—just the best I had to do."

Jim Thorpe's day was 23 years ago, this summer, at the Olympic games in Stockholm. The great Carlisle Indian, a savage orgy of competition, established a total score for the decathlon that stayed on the books until the last Olympics, when Jim Bausch of Kansas erased it by some 65 points.

Jesse Owens' "day" was some three weeks ago, when he tied one world record, and annihilated three others.

"That boy is a marvelous athlete," enthused big Jim. "But he's a specialist. I never specialized. I tried everything, and, I think, in my prime, could have beaten him at his best events."

The superlative performances of the two are:

	Owens.	Thorpe.
100-yard dash.....	9.4	10
220-yard dash.....	20.3	22
Low hurdles.....	22.6	24
Broad jump.	26 ft. 8¼ in.	23 ft. 6 in.

It is with a slightly sour eye that the great track athlete—a former all-American football star and a fine baseball player as well—now regards athletics.

Fun Missing

"There's no fun in it for the kids any more. They have to specialize. If a fellow can run high hurdles, he runs high hurdles and nothing else. No other track events, and you bet they don't let him play football.

"My oldest boy thinks he wants to be a boxer. Well, he'll have to be good enough to whip me before I'll let him become any kind of a professional athlete. If I can't afford to go in for sports, that will be all right.

"But, between you and me, I'll be just as happy if they won't. All the fun has gone out of sports. To many coaches, too much commercialism. It's a wonder a lot of high school boys aren't physically ruined before they ever get to college."

SARAZEN TO TOUR WITH BABE DIDRICKSON

Mr. Boston Sharkey Extols Louis

By JACK CONWAY

Mr. Boston . . . a great teacher. The Detroit Brawler is able to get into position from which to leave his terrible punches fly. "Carnera never had a chance to win, and was subjected to heavy punishment, especially in the fifth and sixth rounds.

"I think Baer will fight better against Louis than he did against Braddock. Max underestimated Braddock, got to his boxing peak too quickly, and then went stale.

He then probably worried a great deal. He was expected to win by a quick knockout, and when he failed to send over a knocker he blew up.

"Louis' knockout of Carnera has created new interest in boxing. The $500,000 gate looked like the old days of boxing. Louis and Baer will draw $500,000 while the Bomber against Braddock is a $500,000 gate.

"I am glad to hear Louis is a quiet, sensible youngster. He will leave the gay night life for others and attend to his training. One cannot step on high and remain an outstanding boxer.

"If Louis keeps going along the way he has for the past year, he is certain to reach the pinchia in the heavyweight division."

RING CLASS

[illegible]

"Louis will stop Carnera," said Joe. "He is the best heavyweight I have seen since the Dempsey-Sharkey fight. He knows how to box. He has been schooled in the fundamentals of boxing. Most of our present-day boxers know very little about the fundamentals of the game."

[illegible]

"I think Louis will knock Carnera out," Roxborough told me at Pompton Lake. "If he does, he is liable to end Primo's career for all time. Moving pictures of the bout might cause some agitation against Louis.

"We don't want anybody to start any kind of a campaign that will prevent Louis from winning the heavyweight title. We shall sacrifice so-called quick money to reach our goal.

GENE Wins State OPEN

TOPS FIELD BY 14 STROKES

By Bill Grimes

Within a few weeks Gene Sarazen, the new state open champion, will be back in this section playing exhibition matches with Babe Didrikson, who is rated as the world's greatest all around women's athlete . . .

Although he topped the field at Oak Hill by 14 strokes, Sarazen could have opened even a wider gap had he elected to bear down during the first round, where he took a 75 . .

There are any number of New England professionals who are capable of matching shots with sarazen, but when a pencil and card are placed in their hands, they lack the consistency of the new Bay State titleholder. Their trouble is simply that they lack confidence. If they could acquire Sarazen's cockiness, they'd tie up with the top notchers.

More than 50 members of the South Shore Country Club attended a testimonial dinner to C. D. Malcolm last night . . . "Stinky" is scheduled to leave these parts shortly, and the South Shore crowd saw fit to honor him.

When "Stinky" walks into the Westlawn C. C. on Bridgeport with the enormous golf bag he received from the South Shore Country Club members, he'll be lucky if the club sleuth gives him an eight-stroke handicap.

Clarence Gibney, the club professional, announces that the Ponkapoag Golf Club at Canton will hold its first annual championship for women teachers of Massachusetts on July 1.

Franklin Park will send a strong ten man team to the New England Public Links championship July 8 at New Haven . . . Ray Marad, Glenhurst Co. golfer was the medalist of the qualifying rounds with a 323 for 54 holes . . .

The other qualifiers were Rene Maselkoski, brother of the Oak Hill Country Club greenskeeper, who is perhaps the best golfer in the game, Mike Clifford, Phil Webber, Joe Mullen, Art Hayes, M. Molin, Julian Noiderman, Frank Devine and Charlie Butler . . .

Billy Ronan, one of the old school, who is rated as the best club maker in New England as well as a most efficient instructor, has been appointed a professional at Stoney Brae . . .

Ronan was the second pro at Franklin Park and the first ever employed by the old Worcester Country Club . . . Although I doubt if Stoney Brae realizes it, Ronan is the best appointment it could have made . . .

POLICE COURT OUTSTANDING DOG

Louis Has Level Head

MOTHER CERTAIN JOE WILL STAY GOOD BOY

AMBASSADOR OF GOOD WILL FOR NEGRO RACE

By Lou Wedemar

Copyright, 1935, by United Press Associations

New York, June 27—Poker-faced Joe Louis, who clawed Primo Carnera into dog-meat and won the title of champion-to-be, let several dozen would-be congratulators cool their heels while he got a good 14-hour sleep.

The worshippers waited in a cold-town hotel from noon to 5 o'clock, but Louis slept comfortably.

This is a good index of the character of the man who has given boxing its first boost into public favor since the days of Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney.

Mrs. Lillie Brooks, his mother, whose religious bent has made the Bomber" into the only "pasim-reading title-holder in history, "Just knew" her boy would take success this way. She said

"You promised me he wouldn't let success turn his head. They won't be able to rush him into anything. When he wants to sleep, he sleeps. And he wants to fight, he fights.

"He's a good boy, Joe is. And he'll keep out of bad company."

It was Joe's mother who gave the clue that solved the fighter's extraordinary ring presence—the Sphinx-like expression, the grim determination, the irresistible, steady onrush that made him more like an Oriental executioner at his rites than a prize-fighter.

HIS MESSAGE

It seems poker-faced Joe once thought of going into the ministry, and spreading good deeds in that way.

But when "Pop" Roxborough, fight manager discovered him, and told him he could be champion some day this son of an Alabama cotton-picker dedicated himself to a similar, bigger task. His friends explain:

"Joe thinks that by being a good fighter he can make everybody respect Negroes. He wants to be an ambassador of good will for his people. That's all that's on his mind."

And his mother adds:

"He's promised me, on the Bible, he will never do anything—in the ring or out—to disgrace his people."

This chunk of living dynamite is only 21 years old, and in three years has risen from a $25-a-week motor-car-er in an automobile plant in Detroit to earn more than $50,000.

HIS AMBITIONS

As he stood in the ring confronting the Giant Carnera, scientifically planning and planting his punches those who saw him as the next champion wondered what he would do with the million or more he should make.

The question is already partly answered, for with his first earnings he bought a home for his mother and a late model of the car he used to assemble laboriously. He was asked:

"What are you going to do when you get a million?"

With one of his rare grins—for Joe Louis has a face as expressionless as a mechanical man's—the apparently merciless man-killer replied

"I'm going to retire and take a trip around the world. Then maybe I'll become a musician."

WOLF Nine Trips MADDEN'S

Fresh from their surprise victory over the second-place Casey club, the lowly Wolf's club play host to the Madden club of Roxbury tonight at Rogers Park, Brighton.

The clothing dealers, the last young lineup of stars, have been on the losing end of some tough league games, but Manager Welch is confident that the line has been shaken and plans a forward march to the top of the standing by adding the Madden club to his list of victims.

In all probability Antonellis will toe the mound for the Brighton outfit with Hamilton or Perkins pitching for the Roxbury aggregation.

Rosindale will visit Dick Casey's Neponset club at the Casey playground and a victory for the Walker outfit will knock the Casey club out of second place. Of the two games played to date between these clubs, the Caseys have won both.

The final game of the evening will bring together St. Augustines and the Hennigans at Jefferson.

A matter of five games in the distance between the Jordan Marsh Club, who are at present holding down first place, and St. Lazarus, who are in sixth place.

Miller's Gain

The Miller Oil team pulled up a whole game on the Boston Twilight League leaders, the C. M. A. C. of Lowell, as a result of the games last evening. The new Middlesex Laundry team stopped a 10-game winning streak of the Frenchmen with an 8 to 7 victory. The Miller Oil team caught the new Lunch Club without its pitching staff and walloped out 18 bingles to win, 15 to 1, before a big crowd at the Cambridge common.

One game is on the card for tonight with the Lowell team against the Jefferson Club at Hoyt field, Cambridge.

AMERICAN Team Beaten

Vancouver, B. C., June 26 (AP)—A picked British Columbia squad tonight regained a measure of lacrosse prestige lost at Los Angeles in 1932, when it swept through an All-American Intercollegiate Team 15—7 victory in the first of a five-game series for the Lally trophy, emblem of international box lacrosse supremacy.

BOSTON ELEVATED

Larger LOSS IS Shown

By Hugh F. Bradshaw

Red continues as the favorite balance sheet color of the Boston Elevated. Latest figures show a deficit of $100,225 for May and $164,083 for April and May.

The fiscal year now ends for the road on March 31, thus the first two months this year show a sizable jump in the excess cost of service from the $17,209 of April and May, 1934. The showing for May was made in the face of a gain in revenue passengers. One can only suppose that the increase in cost of operation threatened to keep ahead of gross operating income.

• • •

With the public ownership problem still up in the air the latest figures on Boston Elevated will undoubtedly provide some first class ammunition. Off hand the futility of trying to operate as a going concern in spite of arguments for public ownership and substitution of Metropolitan District bonds for the common stock, on the other side one can quite easily imagine the more rabid arguing on the grass that the property by right of eminent domain and passage of the conservation act. And finally the chance of a fight to suspend Elevated dividends for a year or two.

• • •

Notebook: The large loss reported by Parr Alpaca was something of a shock to State Street . . . Even though a deficit was expected . . . It presumably came from failure of low operations to absorb the increased costs attendant on a 60-hour week . . . From a balance sheet standpoint, Fall Alpaca is still in wonderful shape . . . Current assets of $5,832,082, current liabilities of $250,586 left an ample margin in cutting the food and merchandise groups for attractive shares, some good values ahead. The idea is to obtain more favorable returns than those paid in the high-priced blue chips . . . Some food shares are almost too low yield . . .

• • •

Stock prices continue to follow an erratic course from session to session there is an almost consistent swaying in the downside to the upside but it most confusing to the small trader and investor for they be told and told that intra-session movements are duplicated by those of whole sections. Possibly one of the hardest shares find such price motion of 5 or 6 points during the day that could not be distributed in any other way. Or, at least, in the conventional manner of the past years back. In any event, it is tending to keep the average market follower away. . . .

• • •

Shorts: American Can is a perfect example of how prices can fade . . . Off practically 5 points in two or three sessions . . . The pool manager is due to step upward . . . Perhaps they will make the 35 range but not much what the industrials do in here . . . Westinghouse must shortly snap out of the congestion area just above 50 or it is going to lose friends . . . Looks too much like distribution . . . The same goes for Johns Manville . . . More pep in Union Pacific would help . . . Outstanding turnover may be poor, but the final figure for the month and the fall outlook are the important items.

California Gas to Refund

Southern California Gas Co. is planning to refund $14,816,000 of 6s% and 6s with a new issue of 1st mortgage and refunding gold bonds, 4 per cent series of 1961, according to application filed with California Railroad Commission.

Arrangements with underwriting syndicate, headed by Blyth & Co., are expected to be completed shortly.

Within a few days application for registration under Securities Act will be filed with SEC.

The company contemplates issuances and sale of $15,000,000 4 per cent bonds, proceeds of which will refund $6,170,000 first and refunding gold bonds Series B 5½s of 1952 and $8,646,000 first mortgage and refunding gold bonds 6s of 1957.

Usual Payments

California-Oregon Power Co. declared a dividend of 87½ cents on account of accumulations, 87½ cents on 8 per cent preferred, both payable July 15, to stock of record June 28. Payments are similar to those made in previous quarters.

CURB Tone Is EASIER

MINING SHARES STEADY

New York, June 27—The curb market continued to display little activity today, although an easier tone in utilities and oils began to indicate the general trend.

Gains in both Gulf and Humble turned to net losses. International Petroleum was also easier, but Imperial Oil held steady.

Mining shares were the only steady group in the list, Sunshine worked higher and Hudson Bay and Pioneer Gold were not far behind.

The utilities were highly irregular, with United Gas preferred dropping almost 2 points and National Fuel Gas and Bond & Share 6 per cent preferred also easier. Columbia Gas, on the other hand, scored a point and American Gas & Electric was steady.

Great Atlantic jumped 1¾ points to 129¾, and Technicolor gained ¾ point in the specialties.

Oil FOR THE Lamps of CHINA

By ALICE TISDALE HOBART

The Plundered City

CHAPTER 55

This is a serialization of the Cosmopolitan production released by Warner Bros.

Despite the close struggle for existence, the business of the Keepers of Light prospered.

The shop-to-shop inspection made the Autumn before, repeated in the Spring and now again in the Autumn, was bringing up the volume of sales as Stephen had foreseen. But even Stephen had underestimated how great his gains would be.

Fascinated, he watched the mounting totals of the daily sales-reports from his agents. Business built on the little cash with a hole in the center, twenty-five hundred cash now to the dollar, swelling the profits by thousands of dollars!

This year the province would yield the Company three million dollars. Stephen began to get some conception of the millions upon millions of people who made up that substratum of society in which he was creating the desire for light.

And now war, that each year since the coming of democracy had taken its percentage of the people's earnings, touched Stephen's business.

City Is Looted

One morning as he went to his office, he found his Chinese staff talking in high, excited voices.

Ai-yah ai-yah, we must draw in our hearts, draw in our hearts. It may happen here.'

'What is the matter?' he demanded.

The soldiers of the old governor have looted the city to the South. A new lord has entered and taxed the merchants one hundred thousand dollars.'

'Impossible,' said Stephen. He had a mental picture of that city with its rows and rows of petty shops, its few merchants of moderate means. 'Impossible; there is not that much money in the town,' he cried.

It is paid,' was the laconic response of the shipping clerk.

Stephen stood aghast. The town would be ruined. Cockeyed Ting what had happened to him? Could he pay for the oil stocks he had undoubtedly got in the looting?

What part of the tax of a hundred thousand dollars had Ting had to pay? He himself must go immediately and see.

At nightfall, Stephen entered the stricken city. Occasional furtive figures skulked along side streets seeking the food shops. But for the rest, the city was like a dead man's abode.

The little shops, once bustling with life, had their night shutters in place, even so early in the evening. The great shop of Ting, general merchant, showed no ray of light between the shutters, and no sound came from within.

The Ruined City

Always before when the shutters were closed—even at China's New Year when they were closed in the daytime—if one listened, one could hear a murmur of life, life urgent, too insistent in its demand to be hushed for a moment. Now there was silence.

Had he better knock? Stephen raised his hand. Then he heard a whisper, "Tong ju, take care." He turned to see a man at his elbow, motioning him to follow. They found a door in the back street and his guide knocked cautiously at a small door in a wall, the rear entrance to the shop of Ting.

'A friend comes,' the man who need his life close in the crack of the door. Someone must have been near for the door was opened quickly and as quickly closed behind them.

Out of the shadows of the shuttered shop a figure materialized carrying a lighted lantern, its wick turned low.

Come, come,' whispered the figure, and they passed into the front shop. Stephen caught glimpses of the empty shelves above the counters. They went silently through court after court, into the innermost recesses of the dwelling.

Once a man's foot clad in white stocking and cloth shoe, was caught in the lantern's glow, once a woman's pointed blue cotton shoe and white anklet stocking above loose at the top, flicking out beneath her trousers, and several times black startled eyes peered out of the dark like deer's eyes, he'd suddenly by the flash of light.

At last they sat down by a high Chinese table; the lantern was put out. Stephen heard whisperings and the rustle of bodies moving, then close at his side the familiar voice of Ting, but muffled and frightened.

Yes. Everything lost, and my tax was heavy. But I will be generous to the Keepers of Light. I will pay them a tenth of what the soldiers have taken from me.

'A tenth'' answered Stephen 'It is not enough. It is but a tenth of the one that the Keepers of Light should bear.'

Tiny Shows Spirit

The bargaining began, and Stephen was secretly delighted that with each point gained, Ting's voice lost a little of its fright. Ah, the bargain. Well, he guessed Ting had spirit enough to weather this catastrophe.

* * *

Then Summer came, bringing the annual catastrophe — this year, flood.

In front of the hong the water lay a thin yellow scum. Inch by inch it rose until it stood in the servants' quarters. The office force arrived in sampans and Hong sent word that he was delayed with affairs of the flood.

Then there descended over Stephen the shadow of the tanks. Was the embankment around the place high enough? Each visit he made the water stood higher.

McBain looked excited, alert and heavy-eyed. What with the Summer's quick succession of tankers coming in at all hours of the day and night and the threat of flood, he had little time for sleep.

It was after nightfall Stephen had just returned to the house, riding in the launch up to the first gallery. He was weary but thankful, for the water seemed to have reached its height. He was eating his dinner when the telephone rang.

Paris Designs---You Sew

BY ANNICE BRINK

THIS IS surely a record to be proud of, in diffusing fashion and good taste, set by the magazine Pictorial Review, which imported original models, made in Paris from American fabrics, on the Normandie, and had patterns in the large stores all over the country a week after the great ship arrived! Here are two of them, with the unmistakable stamp of their originators. Left, Mainbrocher introduces front fullness subtly, running from folds on the shoulders, to double seams that ray soft folds to the hem. Right, in Lucien Lelong's "Hollywood," nubby crepe is draped into a double-cowl bodice lacing its smooth yoke to an open-throat V, and every line from shoulder to hem is svelte. Respectively, they are Pictorial Patterns No. 7904 and 7902. They are still in the few-to-a-city class, and if you wish to know where they are to be found in Boston, phone or write Annice Brink, Fashion Editor (LIBerty 4000).

Gracious Note of Appreciation to Teacher

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

1—Is it proper to write a letter to one's teacher at the end of the term after you have passed an examination, phasing or thanking him or her for the teaching? If so how should the note be worded? In other instance it is a man teacher.

2—What should a person say after being introduced to another person? Very often people say, I'm pleased to meet you, but this is sometimes stilted and stupid.—Do I say I'm glad to meet'cha.' What else would be appropriate?

JUST FOURTEEN

1—Yes, it is a most gracious gesture to write a note to a teacher in appreciation of the instruction that has been given. You might word your note this: and write it in black or dark blue ink, not the purple ink with which you wrote to me.

Dear Mr. Roberts

I do so much want to have you know how much I appreciate the privilege of being in your classes this year, to have the advantage of your expert teaching.

I realize that the passing of the examination at the end of the year was due to your kind and patient instruction and I thank you warmly for the knowledge gained from your classes.

Friendly greetings and wishes that your added work will be a happy one.

Very sincerely yours,

MARY FOURTEEN.

2—Abandon at once saying "I'm pleased to meet you" either clearly or slurred in acknowledgment of an introduction. The thing to say in ack nowledging an introduction is How do you do?" with the addition of the name of the person if you are sure that you heard the name correctly.

It is when you are leaving after an introduction that it is fine now to say, "I am very glad to have met you."

Dear Mrs Beeckman

I wonder if you will please answer the following questions for me?

1—The particular ballroom I have in mind is the Blank Hotel ballroom. The men's checking room is on the right side of the corridor and the women's is on the left side.

When accompanying a young lady to a dance, is it proper to help her remove her wraps upon arrival and then check them for her or should she check her own wraps upon leaving the floor?

2—Does the same apply when leaving?

3—Should the man put on his coat first when leaving and then help his friend with her coat or vice versa?

4—On what side of the young lady should the man walk when strolling about the lounge?

5—When leaving the dance floor after the dance on which side should he man walk, left or right of her?

6—Is it always necessary to thank a girl for a dance, and should this be done immediately after the conclusion of the music or after escorting her to her seat?

7—When beginning to dance, should the man face across the floor and start forward? I have noticed some men start off backward.

8—At a formal banquet, having five courses, three couples at each table, what is the correct seating arrangement, providing there are no place cards?

MAN READER

1—The woman goes to the checking room on the left side and checks her wraps. The attendant will probably give her a check, and she joins her partner in the corridor between the checkroom. It is customary for a woman to wear her wraps into the checkroom.

2—Yes, the same procedure is correct when they are leaving. Usually, and especially when there is a crowd, either the man or the woman indicates a place where they are to meet after they have claimed their wraps.

The woman should always carry a checkroom fee in her purse although it is correct, but not necessary, for the man to offer her the fee from the checkroom attendant.

3—The woman puts on her wrap in the checkroom.

4—The woman on the right of the man is the best rule.

5—And the same rule is best too, when they leave the dance floor.

6—It is proper for the man to thank the girl for the dance and it doesn't make any difference whether he thanks her directly after the dance or after he has taken her to her seat.

7—The man should start for the dance so that the girl is facing the dance floor, but it really doesn't make any difference.

8—At a formal dinner the woman is at the right of her partner.

HOPING TO LOSE FINESSE

By MRS. CULBERTSON

Every now and then a paradoxical situation arises in the play of a Bridge hand—the declarer takes a finesse which he hopes to lose.

This situation comes under the head of psychological plays and it is one of the little stratagems of the game which it is worth while remembering, particularly when playing against not too expert opponents.

West, Dealer. Neither side vulnerable.

	♠92 ♡64 ♢AJ982 ♣10843
♠K643 ♡Q97 ♢754 ♣972	North West East South	♠A7 ♡AJ1085 ♢Q63 ♣KQ
	♠QJ105 ♡K32 ♢K10 ♣A65

The biddings:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1♡ (1)	Double (2)
Pass	2♢	Pass	2♠
Pass	3♢ (3)	Pass	4♠ (4)
Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) A sound opening bid which should always be made for defensive as well as for attacking purposes. If partner has passed a strong hand, there is hope of a part-score or even a game.

If partner has passed a weak hand, South may possibly become declarer at a notrump contract and East is anxious to indicate hearts for the opening lead.

(2) This is the best means of showing the strength of the hand, lowering the spade suit to be shown later.

(3) North's previous bid was forced and he now rebids to show that his East is anxious to indicate strength.

(4) North having shown that his hand is not altogether worthless, South is willing to try for a game. His spade suit requires no little support that he decides to gamble it out without considering a notrump or a possible game in diamonds.

The bidding is worthy of attention since it shows the proper way to reach a game after the opponents have opened the bidding.

South first feels out the situation, cautiously, fearing that North's hand may be extremely weak.

When assured that North has one or more honor-tricks he does not simply bid three spades and make North guess whether to rebid or pass, but jumps to game.

West opened the Queen of hearts and East won with the Ace and immediately led a trump to stop heart ruffs in the dummy. South could have put up the Ace of spades and ruffed his losing heart, but that would still have left him open to the loss of a spade trick and two clubs.

He therefore felt that he had to finesse for the King of spades, so South played the spade five and West won with the King and led a spade back. South won in his own hand.

The situation now looked fairly hopeless, for if East had a sound bid and West had a King and a Queen, East could be depended upon to have the Queen of diamonds.

This meant that South would have no way of eliminating his two losers in clubs and one in hearts in the Queen of diamonds was doubleton and dropped.

But South found a clever play to establish the diamond suit. Concealing his diamond holding, he led the ten and finessed. East fell for the bait.

He should have ducked the diamond lead, hoping thereby to block the suit. Instead, he did as most players would do. He won the trick that was offered to him.

This left South in full control of the situation since at his next opportunity he had only to lead the King of diamonds and overtake with dummy's Ace.

The following three rounds of diamonds would account for his small heart and two small clubs. Losing only the King of spades, Ace of hearts and Queen of diamonds, South made four spades.

Long Engagement Is Test of Love

By RUBY AYRES

I THINK there is, or should be, something rather beautiful about a long engagement, for it is a great test of love and understanding which those who marry in haste can never experience.

How about those girls who are engaged to a man abroad? They have only few and far between letters to keep their love alive, and yet many such an engagement has ended in a perfectly happy marriage.

Some, of course, peter out and die, but that can only be when the love between them was not real, and so it ended naturally when it was a case of "out of sight, out of mind."

I think that time and distance are the greatest tests of love; a separation of 10,000 miles can make no difference to two people who are really in love.

There have been many cases of men who have faithfully waited years for a woman whom for some reason they could not marry; many women who have smilingly watched their youth pass by because of the hope that some day the happiness they longed for would be theirs.

On the other hand there are girls who won't marry the second-best man in their life rather than wait for the first best. To be married at all costs is their reasoning and they foolishly feel that they cannot bear to see their friends and sisters marrying and settling down in life while they themselves remain single.

There can be no hard and fast rule about love and marriage; some most unlikely marriages have turned out exceedingly well, while others which started with every happy augury, end in disaster.

Some long engagements seem to kill love before it is consummated, and some to make it more perfect; it all depends on the two who make the bargain. To enter into a long engagement with one's eyes open is the only wise thing to do.

ADVICE on LOVE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX and NELL BRINKLEY

House Best for After-Movie Call

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been a reader of your column for a long time, and as you've helped so many of my friends I feel you might help me, too.

As a self-respecting girl, I'd like to know when I come home from the movies with my boy friend, which is better: Sit and talk to him for about an hour and a half in his car, or invite him into the house?

"BOOTS."

Automobile visits usually give the neighborhood gossips something to wag their tongues over. If you're superior to this line of chatter, it's all right to sit in the boy friend's car, but if you're an observer of the conventions, better invite the young man into the house.

• • •

SHE'S REDUCED TO "HOLDING THE BAG"

Dear Miss Fairfax

Whenever I go to a party with my girl friends, they ask me if I will mind their bags while they dance. When the dance is almost over, they come for their things, and if I ask them to get me a partner or dance with me themselves, they refuse.

Please tell me—do you think I should turn these girl friends down and chum with other girls? Do you think I should keep on going to dances with them and holding their bags, and never getting a chance to dance myself?

MARY

No, indeed, I don't think you should "hold the bag," while these young ladies go off and enjoy themselves. They are evidently taking advantage of your friendship for them, and your good nature as well, and I should try and find some less selfish

• • •

AGAIN, THE STERN MAMA

Dear Miss Fairfax

I'm 17 and allowed to go out hardly any, not even once a week. All the girls I know are allowed to go out at least three nights a week, provided that their mothers know where they are going. But my mother doesn't believe me when I tell her where I'm going. This is driving me to sneaking. Do you think that's right?

MITZI

It's too bad when a mother refuses to believe her daughter, and the girl sees the rest of them starting out for a good time. Every mother must know that youth has to have some outlet, and when she declines to let a girl go to some place of amusement at least once a week, the girl—in this letter—"sneaks." This is pretty bad all around, and it would be well for mothers, after informing themselves that their daughters have the right type of friends, to let them go out occasionally, openly and above board.

Cupid Says "Go On, Tell Her"

LITTLE CUPID is never satisfied until the job is actually FINISHED and "they" are safely married. There cannot be much doubt as to the plans and intentions of this young couple, but probabilty does not suit Master Cupid, he wants certainty.

So he says to the boy with his arm around the shoulder of the lovely, dark-eyed girl, "Go ahead, TELL HER. Tell her how happy you both will be. Tell her you cannot wait another day. Tell her that two can live as cheaply as one, if you care about that of course you can. And what is 1000 times more important, tell her that two can live more happily than one, and the only thing that counts is HAPPINESS."

The beautiful young couple listen to the words of Cupid who is only repeating the words of their own hearts.

Young people, I repeat, take Cupid's advice and GET MARRIED.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Luxurious Body Oil

Rejuvenates Skin in Few Weeks' Time

By Juliet Shelby

MY IDEA OF a pampered darling is a woman who can afford to have daily body massages with luxurious oils that are perfumed to perfection.

How nice to feel that every square inch of your skin gets as much care as your face, and that it is supple, smooth and glistening with an even, glowing tone!

But few of us are so fortunate! Our oil rubs and massages are usually limited to scalp and face—the rest of the skin suffers along with only a daily washing! And that should not be the case.

Every woman should preserve every bit of the femininity she is born with. The ladies of legend who saw to it that their bodies were smooth as velvet and lily white, their hair glistening, with every movement a study in grace were on the right track.

Today the star of the cinema and stage gets the big hand from most the men you know. Why? Because those girls spend their lives glorifying their femininity, making themselves more beautiful, indulging in such luxuries as daily massage.

They may be independent and capable, yet they give the impression to the world of being girls whose beauty earns for them just about all they want. And that, dear sisters, is what gets the men.

Charming Mary Astor's secret lies in keeping fit, as a fiddle at all times. She firmly advocates keeping the skin of the entire body richly lubricated and supple, and says although it is not so taxing, that any woman can give herself a beneficial rubbing with a body lotion before or after a tubbing. And I agree with her. Get someone to rub your back, and the rest you can do yourself.

Let me give you the name of a new and simply wonderful body lotion which you use sparingly for an all-over massage and which practically rejuvenates your skin in a couple of weeks' time. It is a complete beauty treatment in itself and may be used as freely on your face as on your feet—either as a cleanser, powder base or nightly lubricant. Remember, too, its perfume is exquisite!

If you wish to know the name and place of purchase of this rejuvenating body lotion, call Miss Shalby, Liberty 4000 or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

EDE'S GOSSIP EXPLAINED TO DICKY

By ADELE GARRISON
CHAPTER 381

AT HUGH'S summons, Lillian abruptly stopped her colloquy with me and, turning swiftly, went over to his cot.

"I'm sorry, Hugh," she said, "I should have told you at once that Lee Chow is all right. He lost consciousness for a few seconds, but recovered almost at once. Now he is resting comfortably, and is in no danger whatever. Does that satisfy you?"

"Perfectly," Hugh told her, smiling.

"Then you tell me something," she said with an answering smile. "Why the sudden formality? Since when have I been Mrs Underwood to you?"

Hugh looked oddly uncomfortable for a second, and his explanation seemed lame and awkward.

"I don't exactly know why I did call you that," he said. "Perhaps I was a bit hazy from that slash I got and wasn't back to the time we used more formality in speaking to each other."

TAKING OUT DICKY

"Well! See that you don't get hazy again," Lillian told him, while I fervently wished she would drop the subject. For I knew, or could make a shrewd guess, why Hugh had used her surname instead of the more familiar "Lillian" which he had long used in addressing her.

It was because he had guessed my desire to put our association upon a more formal basis and meant henceforth to address me as "Mrs. Graham," except under conditions where the use of my surname, after our years of close friendship, would be ridiculous.

Lillian's raillery and her injunction had spoiled his plan, however, and I did not know whether I was glad or sorry because of her interference.

"I'll remember—Lillian," he told her, and she put her hand upon Dicky's arm.

"Come, Dicky-bird," she said. "Let's park ourselves outside for a little. I've a million things to ask you and Harry, and to tell you, while Madge is acting as ambassador plenipotentiary and envoy extraordinary from Lee Chow to Hugh."

LILLIAN EXPLAINS

"You see, Dr. Braithwaite won't let either of them leave their respective beds, and Lee Chow evidently had something on his mind or conscience that he wanted Hugh to know without delay. But the stubborn old devil—I really believe he's been half crazy ever since he got jabbed with that poisoned needle—stipulated that nobody but Madge should listen to his tale of woe and retell it again to Hugh.

"Madge has just finished the first part of her job," Lillian rattled on. "She listened to Lee Chow until she swooned, or he did—I haven't that point quite straight yet—and now she's waiting the chance to pass on the good or bad word to Hugh. For another stipulation that our man or less sapient Chinese friend made was that no one else save Hugh's should listen in on the broadcast. So—"

So Dicky repeated, slipping his arm around her and swinging her so that she faced the door, "it would be criminal to delay further so important a conference. And I have troubles enough of my own. I barely had entered the hall door today before Ede began a tale of woe that looks as if it might be a mile long at least. From her prelude, I judge that things at the office are in a most perilous state. She's only waiting to tell me about them before rolling back and rolling up her sleeves for a general spring house cleaning. I suppose I should say autumn, but you get what I mean.

"BETWEEN THE LINES"

"Perfectly," Lillian said dryly. And as Dicky turned his head for a backward glance at Hugh she drew down her right eyelid in a portentous wink.

I also understood perfectly what Dicky was saying "between the lines." I had no doubt that Edith had told him exactly the things he had just repeated, but I knew that under ordinary circumstances he would not have spoken of it before Hugh.

It was much as if he had been a small boy shouting "See! I have marbles, too!" And Lee, with a hearty "So long, old man!" to Hugh, and a friendly, nonchalant "See you later, Madge" to me, he went with Lillian out of the door. I saw from the troubled look in Hugh's eyes, following them, that he also had understood that parting speech of Dicky's.

Kitchen Soda Fountain

By MARTHA LEE

TURN your kitchen into a soda fountain and make drinks at home that compete successfully with the drug store variety.

It takes but a moment if fruit syrups are kept on hand in the refrigerator and ice cream and carbonated beverages stored in it.

Banana Nog is a refreshing and nourishing drink for warm days and is easily made. It also is an effective way to have the children take their milk. They never realize it can be anything good for them if they see it prepared this tricky way. To make the Banana Nog simply whip one fully ripe banana with an egg beater, add to it one cup of milk and sweeten to taste. Fold into it a spoonful of vanilla ice cream if desired.

CRANBERRY DRINK

Cranberry Frappe can be made in a jiffy and is most attractive. Place a scoop of vanilla ice cream in a glass and fill two-thirds full with cranberry juice cocktail. Beat the mixture until foamy.

Try this Strawberry Ice Cream Soda. Place a scoop of vanilla ice cream in a glass and fill with strawberry carbonated beverage. Stir with a spoon. Any flavor can be used in place of the strawberry, such as gingerale, grape, orange or vanilla. Be sure to use the carbonated beverage to get the sparkle of the real soda.

Orange Sherbet made in the same way with orange juice and topped with a sprig of mint will make a delightful drink for the afternoon tea or the porch party.

Don't forget that tea makes an excellent foundation for a cold drink or a punch. The addition of gingerale will give it added pep. Iced coffee can be used in all of these fancy drinks, as in the frosted coffee or coffee shake.

FROSTED COFFEE

4 cups cold, clear, strong coffee
1 pint vanilla ice cream

To serve this for six people, pour thoroughly chilled coffee into a pitcher. Place on a tray containing the glasses, a shaker and a bowl for the ice cream. Put two heaping tablespoons of the ice cream into the shaker, together with a cupful of the coffee, shake until the cream is dissolved, pour into a glass and serve. This should be done in turn for each guest.

COFFEE SHAKE

1 cup double strength coffee
¼ cup of crushed ice
Vanilla
1 to 2 tablespoons powdered sugar
1 to 2 tablespoons heavy cream or evaporated milk

Half fill a pint shaker with freshly made coffee. Add a few drops of vanilla, crushed ice, powdered sugar and cream. Shake vigorously till foamy. Serve in tall slender glasses, topping each with a spoonful of whipped cream. Serves one.

Answers to Readers' Beauty Problems

Question—I have a son nine years of age. His ears are of the projecting kind and are very homely. Unless they are corrected, I know that they will cause him much embarrassment later on in life. I have heard that a surgical operation will correct them, but I cannot afford this method at the present time. Do you know of any cap arrangement that might help to hold the ears back.

Mrs. Mary D. Mc., Woburn.

Answer—To change the shape of a child's ears is practically impossible, but, their direction can be altered. The most-annoying part of ugly ears is that proper care in youth would have kept them inconspicuous if it did not make them pretty. A practical cap arrangement, made of tapes is a good aid in checking a tendency to projection. This is tied on and the tapes are so placed as to come directly over the ears like a little ear cap. Then the strings are adjusted to make sufficient pressure to affect the cartilage. This cap is perfectly comfortable and may be used at night by girls and boys of any age, up to 17 years. When the cartilage is hard the tapes should be thoroughly rubbed with vaseline to aid in softening.

Clever Afternoon Frock

By MARIAN MARTIN

PATTERN 9399

Here's one afternoon frock that's just clever enough to suit your taste be it for "simple" or "dressy" clothes.

The big secret lies in the trimming and the sleeves.

The softness of the bodice and gathered sleeves lends femininity to the tailored crispness of yoke and skirt panel.

Just take your choice, but do choose daintily printed sheer cotton or silk. Complete, Diagrammed Marian Martin Sew Chart included.

Pattern 9399 may be ordered only in sizes, 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3¾ yards 39-inch fabric.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each Marian Martin pattern.

Just out . . . Marian Martin Summer Pattern Book . . . 40 enlightening pages to lead your way to summer chic.

Flowery Cutwork

HOUSEHOLD LINENS — PATTERN 1013

HERE is a happy combination of cutwork and embroidery in these lovely flowers.

Both roses and lilacs are to be done in a color with the leaves in green.

Use them to brighten your bedroom or dining room. The roses are regular cutwork—the lilacs are in lazy-daisy and French knot stitch.

Pattern 1013 comes to you with a transfer pattern of two motifs 8¼ x 8½ inches, four motifs 5¾ x 5¾ inches, two motifs 2¾ x 7 inches and four 1⅞ x 2¼ inch motifs; material requirements; illustrations of all stitches needed; color suggestions.

Send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) for this pattern to Boston Evening American, Needlework Dept., 82 Eighth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Fashion Flashes

NEW silk pique used in touches at the neck and wrists of the new fall frocks has a cellophane stripe.

And there are lovely, soft mat velvets with the glint of cellophane in haphazard threads that catch the night lights.

• • •

"YOU'LL be seeing ostrich feather trimmings on street and evening dresses this fall, and feathers of every variety trimming the hats of the new season.

Little curls of ostrich, in pastel tones, are used in some of the most effective evening headdresses of the moment.

Gilded feathers fashion some of the new laurel wreaths that are being worn for evening.

It looks like open season for birds of all feathers.

• • •

FOR PROSPECTIVE dude ranchers of the season there are ten-gallon cowboy hats in white or black felt, wholly wild western and picturesque.

Add a bandanna and a gingham skirt of cowboy checks, a pair of riveted blue denim trousers and some sturdy boots, and you're all set for life in the great open spaces.

• • •

It comes in navy, brown, white and all pastels, and makes an effective complement to the tailored themes of the season.

If you like, you may have your monogram embroidered on the front, or you may add an anchor clip.

• • •

COAL DUST velvet has a sparkling surface just like its name, and is attained by mixing shiny cellophane with rayon pile. The effect is something pretty glamorous, and you'll be seeing it used in the most important evening wraps next fall.

Velvets also are coming in for metal mixtures, so that they shine like the queen's crown jewels, on an evening. The rayon pile velvet supplies glitter in the first place, and when it is shot with metal threads the result is something brilliant.

There also will be metal coin dotted velvets shown for evening wear next season, and velvet and metal brocades, as well as all kinds of new tricks with velvet and cellophane.

Huge blazer stripes also are in the swim, seen in satin lastex suits and in beach pajamas.

Striped beach hats as big as a real wagon wheel are to be seen on stylish sands just now.

And the vogue of the brassiere-and-shorts swim suit seems to be waning.

WHEN the days are hot—light, crisp food is best for you. Try a big bowl of Kellogg's Rice Krispies. They crackle refreshingly in milk or cream. They'll set you up.

You'll enjoy Rice Krispies at any time of the day. Extra delicious with fruits or honey added. Ideal for supper or at bedtime. Full of nourishment, yet easy to digest.

Children love Rice Krispies. And you couldn't give them a more sensible food. At all grocers in the Mother Goose story package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. Quality guaranteed.

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

"Monster in Dark"

Malden Man Faces Terror in Swamp in the Philippines

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY

You know a few weeks ago I asked three men the same question.

The question was "What is the thing that scares you most?"

Well, sir, one of them answered,

"Reptiles—any sort of reptiles, from a snake right on up to an alligator."

Another one said that darkness was the thing he was most afraid of.

And the third man said that what frightened him most was THE UNKNOWN.

FLOYD GIBBONS

And I thought of those three minds and answers to that question just the other day, when I got a letter from ELMER E. "JACK" DALTON OF 258 BROADWAY, MALDEN.

For, back in 1912, when he was a leatherneck down in the Philippines, Jack had an adventure that was a combination of all three of these terrors.

Jack was a private in the Second Division of the Marine Corps, stationed at Olongapo (I have been there), where the vessels of the Pacific Fleet were being hauled out of the water to have their bottoms scraped clean of barnacles.

He was doing sentry duty at the Naval Magazine, which was built on a strip of land reclaimed from the jungle—a strip of land bordered in on three sides by a matted tangle of jungle vegetation and on the other by the placid green waters of Subig Bay.

"You walked post there," says Jack, "with a gat on your hip—your cumbersome rifle left behind in the barracks.

"No O. D. ever came that way to challenge you in the small hours of the morning, when you felt that a cigarette would help you to pass the time until the next relief came along; for this was the most dismal and inaccessible spot on the island.

"Six or eight small shacks, isolated from one another by some hundred yards or so, and each full of high explosive, comprised the magazine.

"They were connected by a network of narrow-gauge tracks, for convenience in transporting their contents, by a small tram, to the main shed where the big shells were loaded.

"Off to the left was the guardhouse, and fifty yards beyond that, the cook shack. It was here that I had to do my watchdog act, tramping back and forth through the night."

That's the sort of place they put Jack Dalton in—a dank, dismal, lonesome hole.

The company mess sergeant had issued him some rations before he started out—coffee, sugar, some jam and a slab of bacon, and Jack set it down on the verandah of the guard-house.

Then he took up the tedious business of pacing back and forth over his post. But I'm going to let Jack himself tell you the rest of this story.

He juggles a mean pen, Jack does, and he can tell you what he saw and heard—and felt—a lot better than I can.

"I took a look around," says Jack, "and sized up that jungle morass. To a kid just one month in the Philippines and just out of the big Eastern cities, it was sure full of possibilities.

"My imagination peopled that slimy swamp and dark tangle of overhanging growth with every monster that crawled or walked.

"It hadn't looked so inviting in daylight, and, now that darkness had fallen, it was a strain on my city-bred nerves.

"I got a lot of consolation out of the thought that it might be worse. I might have been posted out in the swamp, as some of my buddies were—out there in the midst of all those snakes and queer, crawling animals.

"The voice of 'Nig' Myers, the sergeant of the guard, brought me out of my day-dreams. He had come over to see that I was posted right, and he was saying something about my getting my chow off the verandah of the guard-house before the ants ate it up.

"The cook house was equipped with ant-proof containers, so I picked up my grub and started forth, my leg on the narrow path and trusting to luck not to slip on its slimy surface and fall into the filthy muck on either side.

"I made the cook-shack door, pushed it open and stepped inside, when—

"Crash! The cook stove went over, amid a great rattle of falling pots and pans. Swish! And my legs were knocked from under me and I was down, a great, black monster trying to squirm its black, shiny carcass over my prone, terror-stricken body.

"Believe me, brother, I offered no resistance to its progress. Its reptilian head and neck were so close to my face for a couple of seconds that I died a thousand deaths from stark fear.

"The bulk of its black body, wet and slimy, rested on mine—until, impulsively, I gave a heave!

"Then the monster half slid and half crawled out of the door and disappeared into the swamp.

"After that I felt a little better. At least, the thing was gone. But I was still scared.

"Trembling, I picked myself up and, with many furtive glances over my shoulder, made my way back to the guard-house, where Sergeant Myers was still waiting. I told him my story, and he listened gravely.

"Then he told me that, judging from my description, the beast was an iguana. It lurked around the magazine swamp, and occasionally one of the guard would report its appearance.

"It was a giant lizard, six or seven feet long, with a reptilian head and neck and a great, powerful, scaly tail. Not exactly what I'd call a nice playmate.

Well, sir, that yarn came in to me almost exactly as I told it to you.

Jack has a flair for telling a story, but you don't have to have literary ability like Jack's to get your yarn across to me.

Most of the boys and girls just give the facts and leave it up to me to do the rest.

And I'm dogzone glad to do it. Writing up your adventures gives me the kick of my young life. Tomorrow I'll tell you of 'Madman on the Scaffold.'"

It's as easy as just reaching for it—and a heck of a lot more fun. That's what hundreds of Boston American readers say of the $10 and $100 bills they have received from headline-hunter Floyd Gibbons for their TRUE adventure stories. Floyd says everybody has had at least one thrilling experience, and he wants to write up yours. Send him the facts, and win a pocketful of dough, like Mrs. Henry W. Gould of Worcester, who drew a $10 check and a $100 prize.

HOW TO WIN $100.00

And Membership in The Floyd Gibbons Adventurers' Club

It's all very simple. There are no rules, and everyone is eligible. Just write down the facts of your most thrilling adventure and mail it to Floyd Gibbons, care of the Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston. Remember, the story must be TRUE. Don't worry about how well you can write. Floyd will take care of that. Floyd will pay $10 for every story printed and an extra prize of $100 for the best story of the month. Keep a copy of your story if you wish to have it, AS NO STORIES CAN BE RETURNED. Do not send valuable pictures or souvenirs of your adventure. Send the FACTS.

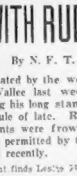
LESLIE HOWARD RADIO GUEST WITH RUDY

By N. F. T.

As stated by the well known Rudy Vallee last week, he is breaking his long standing program rule of late. Return engagements were frowned upon and not permitted by the crooner until recently.

Tonight finds Leslie Howard, the noted actor, back on the variety hour (WEEI) and bringing his 12-year old daughter to play with him in a "take" version of the "Dear Brutus" stage play.



PROUD PAPA

Several weeks back, the distinguished thespian was on the air with Vallee and did the same sketch. It was the occasion of little Miss Howard making her radio and professional debut. As N. F. T. a genuine matter of record, not a case of because she is a very fascinating child, the talented youngster "stole the show" from her doting dad. Actor folk usually dread having the spotlight taken from them by another performer. Not so with this proud papa.

* * *

Henry Armetta, Italian comedian seen in so many screen productions, Sigmund Spaeth, the tune detective, and singing Vicki Chase are the other artists slated to appear with Vallee to round out his hour of coast-to-coasting.

* *

The Paul Whiteman "Music Hall" program will start its third year on the air with a gala anniversary studio show (WEEI—at 10 this evening. All the members of Whiteman's troupe will do specialty turns for the celebration.

GRAND GESTURE

A sightless, paralyzed World War veteran, and a famous blind woman, both of whom have overcome almost insurmountable obstacles in their battles of life, were hailed by "Cheerio" during his birthday broadcast in their honor (WEEI) this morning at 8:30 a. m.

The war veteran is Daniel F. Shea, known in spirit and character by thousands of listeners to Cheerio's programme, while the woman needs no introduction—she is Helen Keller.

When the Honorable Ogden Mills, former Secretary of the Treasury and Senator Alben W. Barkley, Democratic senator from Kentucky, clash in a radio debate on the subject, "Which Road to Recovery?" in the fifth of the series of "America's Town Meetings of the Air" to be broadcast (WBZ) tonight at 10 p. m., it should be demonstrated clearly to the radio audience of the country what a leading New York editorial writer meant by the statement that: "This series should become as important a national institution as the Philharmonic broadcasts. Certainly, the radio could not better justify its existence." It should be well worth cupping an ear.

Radio Answers

Q—Would like to know if Tony and Gus are related. Are they married or single? How old are they? Is Don Humbert over the age of 24?

T. O. L. and E. G. of Cambridge.

A—They are not. Those are radio names, their real names are George Frame Brown, who is Gus, and Mario Chamlee, who is Tony. They are married. Brown is 36 and Chamlee is 32 years of age. Don is 25 years old.

Q—Can you tell me when we can hear "Masquerade" formerly over WEEI waves at noon?

M. F., of Sharon.

A—It is a 4:30 feature now. Every day.

Q—Are the two, "Sam and Jerry" on the "Uncle Charlie Tent Show" program Sunday nights really colored chaps?

DUSKY, of Chelsea.

A—Yes they are.

Q—Is there any reports of Will Rogers coming back to the air?

WIT, of Winchester.

A—Probably within the next six weeks, but not definitely decided.

Q—Who does the gong ringing on the Major Bowes weekly amateur show?

CLANG, of Charlestown.

A—The Major himself does it.

Q—How much is a microphone worth?

R. L., of Lexington.

A—They vary in prices, accordingly to types. A modern "mike" of the ribbon style costs in the neighborhood of $75.00.

Q—Does Jack Benny own a race horse that won at Rockingham last week? If so what is the name of the animal?

R. L. K., of Bellingham.

Hearst Alien Drive Lauded

By Universal Service

Washington, June 27 (US)—Cheers for William Randolph Hearst's campaign to rid the United States of undesirable aliens resounded at a meeting of the District of Columbia encampment of Veterans of Foreign Wars.

George K. Brobeck, national legislative officer of the V. F. W. urged support of the campaign and passage of the bill of Rep. Dies (D) of Texas, for expulsion of three million aliens. He said:

"When people say that such talk is 'just Mr. Hearst,' I always want to look under their hats and into their hearts. Then I can see just what it is that keeps them from being like Mr. Hearst and all other good Americans.

"Passage of the Dies bill will not only fulfill Mr. Hearst's worthy campaign, but will kick one little depression belt hole out of existence, by making jobs for native born citizens."

Clouds Hotter Than Sun

By Associated Press

Los Angeles, June 27—The mysterious nydrogen clouds that flare up on the sun and are blamed for magnetic disturbances on the earth were described today by R. S. Richardson at the annual meeting of the Astronomical Society of the Pacific.

These enormous clouds were described by the Mount Wilson observatory astronomer, as falling into two classes.

One, he said, is bright and therefore much hotter than the surface of the sun, which is about 10,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

The other is dark and much colder than the sun's surface.

"The bright, hot clouds," he said, "have been found to cause magnetic disturbances on the earth, sometimes disrupting telephone and telegraph services, usually a day or so after their appearance on the sun.

"The dark clouds are believed to have a similar effect on the earth, although the evidence of this is not as strong."

COCHECO MILL Plans to Reopen

East Rochester, N. H., June 27 (AP)—Fulton Elridge, treasurer of the Cocheco Woolen Manufacturing Company, today announced an attempt to operate the mill, closed twice within a month by labor disputes, would be made in a few days.

He said two petitions urging reopening had been signed by 700 residents of East Rochester and Rochester, and assurance of police protection led to the company's decision.

Queen, 10,000 Locked Up! It's Where They Bee-Long

"The queen was in the—"

You think you know? But you're wrong. The queen, and 10,000 faithful myrmidons, were in the basement of Sergeant Walter A. Brown's home, waiting a claimant today.

The good queen, an unusually large Italian honey bee, is as docile today as can be, but before she was lured to the custody of the law, she made things hum at Gordon street and High Rock way, Brighton.

The hugh swarm of insects were gathered in a tree when a rumbling truck startled them into the air. Boys playing in a nearby field helped things along by flinging sticks at them.

The bees lost their temper, and soon the police department was answering emergency calls from residents in the neighborhood, who reported that they were being kept indoors by the angry swarm.

Sergeant Brown and Patrolman Edward Duddy were dispatched to the scene. With the aid of George Crosby, of 23 Cambridge terrace, Allston, they succeeded in gathering them in.

The lure, in case you ever need to know, was damp brown sugar. Right now they are in Sergeant Brown's basement. They're supposed to be very valuable.

FUNERAL RITES FOR SKIPPER OF STEEL PIER

Funeral arrangements for Captain Willard Wade, 60, of Waldoboro, Me., master of the S. S. Steel Pier, the Provincetown excursion boat, who died of a heart ailment in the port warden's office, 86 Broad street, were to be completed today.

Captain Wade and his twin brother, Captain Millard F. Wade, who was Boston port warden at the time of his death a year ago, were so much alike that even close friends had difficulty in telling them apart.

They were known from Maine, where they first went to sea, to South America, where they made port many times in their careers.

LOUIS B. GOODALL

Funeral services for Colonel Louis B. Goodall, 83, former Maine congressman and one of that state's leading textile manufacturers, who died yesterday after a brief illness at his home in Sanford, will be conducted at 2 p. m. tomorrow from his late residence.

HERBERT WOOD LEACH

The funeral of Herbert Wood Leach, 76, who died yesterday at his home, 153 Laurestan street, Brockton, will be held Saturday afternoon in Penobscot, Me., where he was born.

His death closes one of the most dramatic chapters in the history of the exploration of the North Pole. He was the last survivor of the ill-fated steamer Jeanette, which sank below the Arctic ice in 1880.

With Lieutenant-Commander G. W. DeLong, Leach and 11 other survivors continued on to Siberia, and received aid there. A few years ago he received the Congressional Medal of Honor for heroism.

REV. WILLIAM W. BUSTARD

Funeral services for the Rev. William W. Bustard, 63, one of the country's best-known Baptist evangelists, and former pastor of the Dudley Street Baptist Church, Roxbury, who died yesterday at his home in Delmar, Cal., will be held there at 2:00 p. m. tomorrow.

MRS. MARY O'MALLEY

Solemn high mass of requiem, for Mrs. Mary O'Malley, 89, mother of Walter J. O'Malley, assistant corporation counsel for the City of Boston, who died yesterday at her home, 50 Hastings street, West Roxbury, will be celebrated at 11 a. m. Saturday in St. Theresa's Church.

MRS. SARAH LAMBIRTH

Funeral arrangements for Mrs. Sarah Lambirth, 86, wife of James R. Lambirth, professor emeritus of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who died yesterday at her home, 11 Gravenor road, Jamaica Plain, were to be complete today.

RAYMOND WARREN

Funeral arrangements for Raymond Warren, 48, of 17 Coolidge avenue, Medford, who died at Gale Hospital yesterday as a result of injuries received when he was knocked down by an automobile Tuesday, have not been completed.

MRS. LIZZIE TAYLOR

The funeral of Mrs. Lizzie Taylor, who died yesterday at her home, 7 Myrtle street, Stoneham, will be conducted at 2:30 p. m. Saturday from the First Congregational Church, Stoneham.

MRS. CAROLINE R. SOMERS

Funeral services were conducted in Washington street, today for Mrs. Caroline R. Somers, a native of Boston and long a resident of this and other New England cities.

She was the mother of Lee Somers, former Boston newspaperman now executive assistant to the president of the American Federation of Government Employes. She died Sunday after an illness of over a year.

KING CAROL Ends Bedtime Stories

Bucharest, June 27 (AP)—Thirteen-year-old Prince Mihal (Michael) asked his father, King Carol, today to cease putting him to bed in recognition of his having passed school examinations with honors.

The prince protested his school days are over and he is no longer a baby. The king acceded to his request.

Ever since former Queen Helen left Rumania three years ago because of her divorces from Carol, the king has read a bedtime story to Mihai and lulled him to sleep each night.

HARVARD 'EAR' Can Hear All Sound

Just how loud is the chirp of a cricket? Or the chirp of a newfangled robin??

Harvard scientists in the Cruft Laboratory have developed a super-sensitive "ear" which is able to detect supersonuc sounds inaudible to the human ear.

The device, perfected by Professor George W. Pierce and assistants, consists of a crystal cell, which is put into a horn shaped like the half of an egg. When the sound strikes the crystal the electric current is set up between the two metal plates which hold the salts.

Woman Ends Life

Despondency over continued poor health was given today as the cause of the suicide of Mrs. Susan Brittan, of Commonwealth avenue, Allston. She inhaled illuminating gas.

HELEN C. FRICK Pays $19,525 Tax

Beverly, June 27—Helen C. Frick, daughter of the late Henry Clay Frick, steel and coke magnate, was the first person to pay the 1935 Beverly taxes. Her tax, $19,525, on her Pride's Crossing show place, was the largest individual return made, city officials said.

The United Shoe Machinery Plant here paid $98,449 in taxes, the largest return made by any corporation.

MONEY IN SHOE, It Goes Anyway

William H. Robbins, 35, of Old street, Randolph, celebrated the Joe Louis victory with an ultra stranger, he told police. The next he remembers was walking along Dudley street, which was odd, because he started the party in an automobile.

He found later he had lost $35. That, too, was odd, because he had hidden it in his shoe.

A New Tower of Babel

At Washington

A VERITABLE Tower of Babel at Washington has jurisdiction over matters pertaining to foreign trade.

No fewer than fifty federal bureaus, departments and agencies are at present intervening in the formulation of policy and regulations pertaining to external commerce.

In the circumstances, it is small wonder that the American business man is confused and handicapped in his dealings with the outside world.

President Roosevelt recently made a step in the right direction, namely of CURTAILING AN EXCESSIVE MULTIPLICATION OF BUREAUCRACY, in abolishing the office of special foreign trade adviser.

UNFORTUNATELY, this move put out of office George N. Peek, who has had a clearer understanding of the requirements of a soundly American foreign policy, than any of the other advisers of the President.

In fact, on most matters, Mr. Peek's practical opinions were almost diametrically OPPOSED TO THE DANGEROUSLY VISIONARY VIEWS OF SECRETARIES HULL AND WALLACE.

But Mr. Peek had formulated his advice, presented it to the President, and in the circumstances there was no need for longer continuing the office.

However, it is too bad for the people of the United States that Mr. Roosevelt did not translate the Peek counsel into tangible policies, instead of following the will o' the wisp doctrines of the State Department.

INSTEAD of continuing the chaos, resulting from permitting 50 unco-ordinated bureaucracies to meddle into foreign trade, the President ought to carry out the wise recommendation for the establishment of a permanent board of foreign trade composed of men EXPERIENCED in the needs of American industry, agriculture, finance and transportation.

Working with such a board, the policy making departments should be Commerce and the Treasury, and their decisions should be predicated on SOUND INTERNATIONAL BOOKKEEPING.

Instead of being permitted to continue to run the show, the State Department should be charged with "selling" the foreign policies "manufactured" elsewhere at Washington.

Then we should perhaps cease to be children in international affairs, and might be expected to pursue policies designed to PROMOTE THE ECONOMIC WELFARE AND HAPPINESS OF THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES.

Army Expansion

In New England

FAMOUS old forts all over New England will shortly hum again with patriotic activities.

Major-General Fox Conner, commander of the First Corps area, made it plain this week that this action is to witness a revival of preparedness days.

Remember the old pre-war Preparedness Parade through the streets of Boston?

How thousands joined in the procession, and cheers were heard on all sides?

Well, we HAD mighty little preparedness then, and haven't seen much of it since.

Now we're going to start to train men for the national defense against the days that may come all unexpectedly.

Forts Devens, Banks and Rodman in the Bay State will have increased garrisons next month.

Maine, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Connecticut forts will also get more men.

If the present Army policy is pursued in a logical way, American patriots can enjoy one happy thought.

It is this:

"We won't be caught napping again!"

"History Is the Bunk"

If You Don't Study It

Young Mr. James Roosevelt, son of the President, was not very happy in two recent political utterances.

In one he poked fun at the Grass Root Republicans for raising the issue of States' rights at Springfield, where Lincoln is buried.

"The Republicans are as muddle-headed as ever," opined son James.

"Any party that will raise the States' rights issue at the shrine of Abraham Lincoln shows that it is not thinking any more clearly than it did several years ago."

The sad truth is that Lincoln was a lifelong believer in States' rights, was elected President on a platform pledged to respect States' rights, and did his utmost to preserve the rights of every State as long as it remained in the Union.

Young Mr. Roosevelt also credited Thomas Jefferson with being one of the authors of the Constitution. Jefferson was in France when the Constitution was written and had no hand in writing it whatever.

Apparently Mr. Roosevelt did not specialize in American history at Harvard.

Parole in Practice

Another Example

G-Men, trapping a couple of alleged narcotic pedlars in New York's Bronx, announce that the pair (man and wife) have been making money at the rate of $35,000 a year in the drug traffic.

The man, they also say, was on a ten-year probationary sentence for violating the Harrison Narcotic Act and was released only nine months ago from Leavenworth.

Which would seem to be another BRILLIANT example of the workings of our parole system.

"Hanging's Not Fair"

Says a Kidnaper

Arthur Gooch, convicted Texas kidnaper, will be hanged in the Federal jail at Muskogee, Oklahoma, on Sept. 13, in accordance with the terms of the so-called Lindbergh law.

Gooch told the judge:

"I don't believe I should be hanged when no other kidnaper ever has paid such a penalty."

It could be pointed out to him that if other kidnapers had been hanged HE might have been deterred from kidnaping.

Chiseling In!

Labor lives by its wages. When wages are lacking, the dole begins.

Behind the walls of a protective tariff, America built up during the years the world's greatest industries and greatest home market, with the world's highest standard of living MAINTAINED BY AMERICAN WAGES.

Depression conditions have impaired this standard for millions. But the depression will end, as all depressions have ended.

Hence the kind of unemployment caused by the depression must be considered TEMPORARY UNEMPLOYMENT.

But, while we strive for recovery, another factor is making for PERMANENT UNEMPLOYMENT for many thousands of citizens.

That factor is competition in our home market from coolie labor and pauper labor countries.

Products from these foreign lands allure buyers because the price is cheap.

But by causing our own industries to shrink and unemployment to become permanent, these cheap products are actually THE DEAREST GOODS WE CAN BUY.

Not free trade theories, as imagined by Secretary Hull with his "reciprocal" tariff treaties, but ADEQUATE PROTECTION is and must be the nation's vital need.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

O. O. McIntyre

New York, June 27 — They buried Pat Harford with the full honors they bestowed upon ex-Shepherds of the Lambs the other day. Several carriages of the theatrical great followed him to his resting place. Pat was not a member of the club. For 40 years he had been the night elevator man.

Almost everybody in the stage world knew Pat. He saw the rise and fall of the stage through the eyes of a historian and it grieved him. Maurice Barrymore rarely went to the club without dropping by to call out "Hello Pat." Wilton Lackeye tried out his famous stories on him.

It is a desolating thought for the Lambs that they shall never see Pat again in this world. A humble worker, a runner of inglorious chores, he was a gentleman of profound religious leanings and many worldlings stumbling tipsily into his lift after midnight always felt a wee ashamed.

Pat, gnarled with rheumatism, had a shy pathos that sweetened his obscure niche in the world. Sometimes he would murmur sudden wisdome that would be whispered about the club for days.

He remained until the end of his 75 years a gentle spirit buffetings could not harden.

I was thinking today what hilarious fun it would be to turn W. C. Fields, Phil Baker, Charles Butterworth, Bobby Clark, Joe Cook, Frank Fay and Jack Benny loose in a room and let their comedy run riot. Of course, they might become immediately self-conscious and glum and the affair would be as dull as ditch water.

The only comedian who ever seemed funny to me off stage is Walter Catlett, and not then until he had downed about a half dozen. And was feeling grand.

Webster Hall at intervals has an after midnight ball given over largely to the androgynous antics of loose-wristed lads. In ballmasque costumes, they skip, hippity hop and prance along the streets to the affair roguishly rouged, and run the gamut of sidewalk jeers with shrugs and head tosses.

After the ball, they gather at a Sixth avenue automat where crowds gape through the windows and boo. The brazenry is about the most sickening scene of the modern spectacle.

The girl boot-black is a vocational innovation that New York is assimilating a little sheepishly. The few I have seen are bright college-looking girls and their approach is rather timid.

Two at Bryant Park wear berets, jerkies and corduroy skirts. One at Columbus Circle is prematurely gray. She resembled Jeanne Eagels.

Cole Porter, rounding in from a swing around the globe, is expected to become a permanent fixture in the New York scene. For many years he has lived in a chateau in France, crossing to America only to answer theatrical calls for his musical and lyrical wares.

But even a high-priced composer's royalties are almost insufficient for the gay living and taxing demands of expatriates. Nearly all save Porter have long since died. Porter and Jimmy Savo, incidentally, could be twins.

Thingumabobs: Jim Flagg, often offered small fortunes for his famous crayone by nouveaux riche, refuses, but does them of friends for nothing . . .

The late Harry Atkin called his Flushing home "Mortgage Manor" . . . When visitors shocked, he'd call out: "I'm sending a check." . . . Milwaukee, Wis., has a Kinnickinnic avenue . . .

Will Rogers's daughter Mary refused a fine Broadway offer to gain the experience of still another season in stock . . . Bert and Grace Lytell, comebound, stopped over to see the Grand Canyon for the first time and were so entranced they remained three days.

Arnold Bennett's American royalties since his passing have averaged $12,000 a year.

I notice dancing has undergone some distinct changes since my brief lay-off from public cafes. The new method is for the man to hold the girl at arms' length with a light hip hold, her arms resting lightly on his shoulders.

Thus executing diminutive Charleston steps and rolling eyes in rapturous ecstasy they inch around the floor. Sometimes to make it even more terrible the girl smokes as she dances.

At the Versailles an O, so handsome exquisite with Narcissus-like abstraction was guiding his charming partner about the floor and mirror dancing in a studied pre-occupation.

He seemed entirely lost in idyllic reverie. Harry Silvey, watching him awhile, observed:

"He's just running through a few love scenes with himself."

INDECENT EXPOSURE OF THE VOICE

There are two telephones on my office desk. They ring all day. First I answer one, then the other. After I have answered them for about an hour I am fit to be tied.

There is only one thing I desire and that is a permit to commit a messy mass murder. And it's all because of those Voices.

Funny thing—speech. It's the most uncivilized part of our lives.

We've learned to cover our tummies and control our fists.

We hesitate plenty before we heave bricks at passers-by, or dump garbage upon them. And the dumbest moron knows that it's a Complete Social Error to send poisoned pen drops.

MENANCE IN TALK

But we ruthlessly inflict a hundred times as much damage in five minutes conversation by INDECENT EXPOSURE OF THE VOICE.

We cannot all be Grace Moores or Lawrence Tibbetts, but we can all have clear, friendly voices.

And we can all have such voices regardless of our personal destinies.

We do not have to be happy or hopeful to speak pleasantly. We can be angry, grief-stricken, discouraged, worried, burdened by endless miseries, and yet so manipulate our mouths and throats that they will produce agreeable sounds.

In short, our voices can be, and should be, as dissociated from our private states of mind as the door hinges of the room in which we sit, the bed springs, the can openers or any other noise making mechanism.

GETS THE BACKFIRE

BUT DO WE — AND ARE THEY?

Don't all speak at once

You know the answer to those questions . . . and so do you, and you, and YOU! We DON'T—and they AREN'T.

Not one person out of a thousand exercises the slightest control over his speaking sounds—or what he reveals thereby.

Has Jim Jones had a fight with his wife? The first stranger to whom he bares his tonsils gets the accumulated backfire, all the pent up rage and resentment he dared not hurt at the Mrs.—to the complete demoralization of the poor chap's disposition.

Has the stranger dons anything to deserve such a bombardment? He has not.

But what of that? Jim's got it off HIS chest—and if the stranger happens to be in the firing line that's just his bad luck.

Is Tilly Smith indulging in an orgy of self-pity? Does she feel that she has Been Done Dirt by her family in particulars and the universe in general?

Forthwith she spills it all upon her unoffending neighbor. Said neighbor may be, probably is, carrying a heavy load of her own.

ONE SHRILL YELP

She may be even more badly treated than Tilly—more discouraged and desperate.

But that's nothing to Tilly. Without a qualm, she unloads her peeve in one shrill yelp.

Nor are such outbursts limited by emergencies. Go out on a scouting expedition anywhere and get an earful.

You may have only the most rudimentary knowledge of psychology, yet it's a safe bet that after five minutes' audition you'll have the fundamental facts of the speaker's character and life history.

There—as plainly as though blazing from an electric sign—is the story of all his, or her, grouches and griefs, regrets and rebellions, terrors and failures.

Each chapter revealed and recorded on your protesting nerves by mumble and mutter, wheeze and whine, snarl and rasp.

And all for what? All because the owner of that voice hasn't the common decency or consideration to cover up his moods and keep his troubles to himself.

THERE OUGHTA BE A LAW AGAINST VOICES LIKE THAT!

Maybe not capital punishment.

But 20 years, at least—and most of 'em spent at hard labor! What say?

Isn't It So?

He will always be poor who does not know how to live upon a little.

A man must not only aim at something but he must have light to hit the mark.

Nothing valuable can be lost by taking time.

Success is found through hard work.

Everything is possible to the man with a purpose.

Between saying and doing many a pair of shoes is worn out.

Great wisdom of man consists in knowing his follies.

Truth is not a pier to which life is tied. It is a raft on which we navigate the seas of life.

Many a flattering speech contains its own poison.

Envy is an enemy to honor.

Love lasts through life and adapts itself to every age and circumstance.

Novel Railroad Idea

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER, OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Edwin C. Hill

This writer learned today that Wall Street is taking a close, serious look at the proposal now before the Government to establish a flat fare of $1 for any distance on the railroad, just like the three-cent postage for a letter.

Joseph B. Eastman, Federal Transportation Co-ordinator, and members of the Interstate Commerce Committee are examining the plan with intense interest.

On the whole, the reception of this certainly unconventional proposition in conservative precincts has been surprising.

BACKGROUND OF NEWS

Former State Senator John A. Hastings of New York is sponsoring it, and right here our ticket on this line takes us back 20 years or more into the human background of the news.

It has to do with the late Phil Francis, his association with Senator Hastings and how the good or ill men do lives after them.

Phil Francis was one of the most brilliant editorial writers of his day—of pretty nearly any man's day, for that matter—for many years with the Hearst newspapers.

At this point I turn over the typewriter to an old-time California newspaperman who was one of Phil Francis's most intimate friends.

"I think in 1912 it was when I went to Stockton, Cal., from San Francisco, for a flood story. The San Joaquin River was on a rampage, and I was wallowing around in mud and rain from early morning until pretty nearly midnight before I got my story on the wire. Wet, tired and hungry, I dropped into a saloon.

"There was three or four men at the bar, drinking and talking. One of them, a man of about fifty-five, short in stature, rather heavily built, vigorous and alert in appearance, with sharp, black eyes, caught my interest.

"He was Phil Francis, one of the editors of a Stockton newspaper, a philosopher and critic of men and events in his off-shift hours. His friends were interesting, too, and we had a pleasant hour.

"Finally he and I sat alone at a table, having a drink or two. 'Your fare to San Francisco will be $2.90, won't it?' he asked. 'Yes,' I said, puzzled at his abrupt question. Let me show you something.

"He rummaged in his pocket, got out four or five smeary envelopes and a stub pencil, love open the envelopes to get a clean sheet on one side and began jotting down facts and figures and diagrams to show that the only way to save the country was to establish the $1-flat fare on all railroads for any distance.

"I had an elaborate ignorance of the entire subject and I think Phil Francis was the only man in the world who could have attracted my mind to such matters at that moment—dank, unslept, dishevelled, wet and hungry, yet actually interested and concerned about the flat passenger rate, as Phil Francis conjured up its immediate and critical importance.

"He told me that for nearly 30 years this had been his obsession to get the government to arrange both freight and passenger traffic just as it had arranged the postal service—one small charge for the long or short haul for a given unit.

BOBS UP AGAIN

"He buttonholed his friends on the street, he wrote letters to congressmen and made speeches. Then he fell in with Senator John A. Hastings, the boy senator from Brooklyn.

Their tangle over their joint affairs in the Sinaloa mining company of Mexico was a whole lot like an informal mix-up in a Sonora county backroom. It got into the courts and it was a merry brawl while it lasted.

"Senator Hastings accused Phil of having planted some dope in his room at a hotel in Albany as part of a frame-up. Phil, aging but still on his feet, was stepping in fast. Then Phil died in 1924, and the Sinaloa battle and the passenger rate battle, too, were inconclusive.

"Now, eleven years later, Senator Hastings moves up to the Government the $1 rate scheme, handsomely buttressed with detailed statistics and arguments.

"Remembering Phil, I feel sure of one thing. If Senator Hastings puts this thing over, the battle of Sinaloa and all its unpleasantness will be forgotten and forgiven."

And Still We Love Them—

Women may not be so brainy—but not EVERY woman imagines that she a Rembrandt, just because she managed to paint the porch-glider without dripping spots all over the floor.

No man really likes to the woman he loves, by choice. He just can't think of any other way of answering all her questions without TELLING her anything.

The average woman's worst folly is to give a man a good laying out, and then follow it up with trying to "win him back" with kisses before his vanity has begun to thaw out.

Even when the screen play is depressing, a woman can get a lot of relish out of it, if only by watching some other woman suffer worse than SHE does.

Man is Nature's pet. But there will never be any real sex-equality so long as he has to suffer the everlasting torment of losing the hair on his head and of shaving it off of his chin.

A girl who marries in haste, nowadays, is usually kept so busy holding down a job that she has no "leisure" in which to enjoy repenting.

It is only infatuation that requires a pulmotor. Real love always settles down, sooner or later, into that comfortable "pal" feeling, which needs no artificial stimulus to keep it alive.

Still, there is no use in putting too much strain on a man's heart by going around in sunggoggles, with your face smeared with sun-blister, even though he ought to love you just as much that way.

It isn't real love unless a girl can think of counting a man's laundry and putting the salve on his sunburn as an "emotional adventure."

'Dear Govt.' -:- By Winston Norman

Hon. Sen. Wagner,
U. S. Senate.
Dear Senator Wagner:

I'S there any nice Govt. Pamflets on your Social Security Bill, which I can take one & use it on my Landlord?

My landlord is the worst kind of a Tory, he comes around about once a week & trys to chizzle me out of the back rent. Just like Yesterday for instance, he give a Knock on the Door & he says:

"You are now 6 mos. behind on your Rent," he says, "and how long do you think I am going to go on keeping you & your family for a pet?"

I tried to calm him down, I says:

"Poof, you don't need to worry about such trifles as Back Rent, you can live off of the Govt from now on, because Miss Perkins & Sen. Wagner has give us Social Security."

"What is Social Security?" says my Landlord, "I am a Republican, so I am ignorant."

"Social Security is a Law where everybody will take in each others Pensions for a living." I told him, and then I went on, Sen. Wagner, & showed him where you and the New Deal is going to be responsable every time the Forgotten Man & his Wife gives birth to a Forgotten Child.

"The Democrat Party will guarantee every Child a ripe old age, if he lives that long," I says, "and they will also pension him off in case he grows up & don't want to work."

"What would they do for him if he wanted to work?" says my Landlord.

"In that case the New Deal can't help him," I says.

My Landlord kind of frowned, he says:

"Where will they get the Money to pay these pensions on Reshys, Old Age, and accidents like that?"

"They will get the money out of Taxes on your Wages," I told him, "but you won't feel it none, because they won't never take more than 6 per cent off of you, and the New Deal will give it back the minute you die."

"In that case," says my Landlord, "it looks like we will be better off dead, because the New Deal is taking us to Heaven on the Installment Plan."

"That is the idea," I says to him, "the Democrat Party will be sort of like a Guardian Angel for the U. S. People."

"They will be even better than a Guardian Angel," says my Landlord, "because the Democrat Party will rush in at places where Angels fear to tread."

Well, Senator Wagner, I thought I had broke him down at last.

"You have saw the light," I says to him, "so now, is there any more questions?"

"Just one little question," says my Landlord, "When the h— are you going to pay the Rent?"

Yrs. discouraged,
W. NORMAN.

Text For Today "Be strong and of a good courage, for Jehovah, thy God, is with thee wheresoever thou goest."—Joshua 1:9. Suggested by the Rev. Robert L. Webb, D. D., First Baptist Church, Dorchester.
